Thousands of people enjoyed the colourful and interesting floats in last week's parade in Haliburton, and the efforts of the participants have been rewarded with a number of prizes.

Here they are, listed by winner first, and others following.

The Wig-a-mog trophy for the best entry in the parade was awarded to the Butcher Block and Deli's contribution. The Haliburton Lumber awards for the best theme float went to Camp Wanakita, the Haliburton Scout Reserve, and the Wig-a-mog Inn.

The Ed Youngdale and Company award for camps and youth groups went to the Haliburton Scout Reserve, Camp Wanakita, and Camp White Pine. The Vary Trophy for Commercial Entries went to Haliburton Lumber, followed by Trucks Plus and Remax.

The Curry Motors Trophy for Lodge Entries goes to the Wig-a-mog Inn, who are followed by Maple Sands and Willow Beach. Special organizations were awarded for their entries, with Ontario

Students Against Drunk Driving coming first, followed by Extensicare and Wee Care.

The best individual entries were determined to be Lakeshore Boat Repair, Wind-Sur-Finn, and the colourful Clarence Rowbotham. The decorated bicycle winner was the Peterborough Bike Rides followed by the Haliburton Equestrians.

Prizes were determined by judges who based their judgements on 40 per cent theme, 20 per cent originality, 20 per cent effort, and overall effect 20 per cent.

FLOATING FANTASIA: Three cheerful sunbathers from the Wig-A-Mog Inn glide by the crowds at the annual Rotary Carnival parade along the main street of Haliburton on Wednesday. Thousands lined the long parade route to watch dozens of floats and some crazy dancers who tagged along with the bands.

Democracy better than revolt: coalition

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The Anson, Hindon and Minden Ratepayers Association wants to tap into growing political awareness by having another advanced poll on a Saturday.

November's municipal election "is very important to people this year," Bob Hurrell, representing the coalition of 13 lake associations in the municipality, told council Thursday. "None of us wants a tax revolt (as an expression of discontent.) To allow people to vote allows them to participate in the democratic process. Let's hope the traditional patterns in the past wouldn't be repeated and we can take the lethargy out of the electorate."

More than half of the municipality's voters are seasonal residents and yet in past elections, approximately only five per cent have voted. Minden used to have advanced polls on two Saturdays, but law now dictates one advanced poll on a Saturday (November 2), and one on a Wednesday (November 6.) It's at council's discretion whether to act on the ratepayers association's request to hold a third poll on Saturday, November 9. The election is Tuesday, November 12.

In past years, a maximum of 200

Calling all fair queen hopefuls

The Haliburton County Fair is having a "Fair Queen Pageant" on Friday August 16th at 7:00 p.m. in the upstairs of the Minden arena.

The Committee would like the public to attend and support the contestants as they vie for the title of "Miss Haliburton Fair Queen 1991".

The Minden Rotary Club is sponsoring the pageant and is providing the cash awards. Sandra Walker has been given over $300 in gift certificates to award as prizes for the Queen and Princesses.

of the municipality's 6,000 voters have used the advanced polls.

Many cottagers have a hard time getting to the Highlands mid-week and Hurrell is hoping that by offering two Saturday polls, more cottagers would exercise their franchise. As well, the association is urging more use of proxy votes, which Councillor Verne Graham agreed was being underused.

Graham took offense, however, to Hurrell's suggestion that the association help pay the $1,000 cost of a third advanced poll. He thought such a contribution would be illegal, but further investigation is showing that it may be allowed.

"I can't see how we can say no (to the request) when half of the money is coming out of their pockets" through taxation, Councillor Lewis Stevens said. "We are representing them as well as the regular residents."

Council will meet with the association at the next council meeting to make a decision.

a navigable level, and this means lowering the levels of reservoir lakes, like those in Haliburton County, as needed.

But people with lakefront land want to control the lowering of their lakes, which often leaves their docks high and dry and their only access to the water across a muddy plane.

Bernie Neary of the Dorset MOE says if water flow was restricted from the reservoir lakes, the higher phosphorus levels in the Kawartha lakes would lead to algae blooming and nutrient pollution. It would also threaten the sewage plants in Peterborough and elsewhere, since they were designed with specific flow rates in mind, and any change will throw the systems out.

He said the system of reservoir lakes and the canals has always been artificial, but the lakes and man-made systems have adapted to it, and any change would be very disruptive.

An issue many in the audience brought up was that the TSW was designed for commercial traffic when virtually no-one lived in Haliburton County, but now there is almost no commercial traffic on the waterway, and Highland lakes have relatively high populations.

Gypsy moth talks stall as time flies

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Negotiations for a new spray contract between the Ministry of Natural Resources and the Gypsy Moth Management Committee have stalled, despite concerns the clock is running out.

"If we can't catch the seasonal residents over the next two weeks, we're going to miss a lot of them," said Len Munt, the county's Gypsy moth co-ordinator. He is worried about wasting valuable time mailing applications and making long distance phone calls.

At a committee meeting Thursday at Wig-a-Mog Inn, the MNR's proposal was turned down.

The MNR wants to charge landowners $60 for the first three acres sprayed. Using a sliding scale, landowners would pay $15, $10 and $1 respectively for each additional acre. One hundred acres would cost over $600 to spray.

The GMMC, which consists of 17 districts and one First Nation reserve, rejected the proposal because the price was too high. Under the MNR's present agreement, which expires December 31, 1991, landowners pay $6 an acre.

The main traffic now is recreational, and Alyeo said his objective is to keep it navigable for these craft, and considering the problems of Haliburton's lakes is secondary.

SPREADING THE WORD: On August 23 and 24, more than 100 kayakers and canoeists will converge at the Minden White Water Reserve for World Cup races. At Thursday's council meeting, organizer Richard Hofer, right, presents Reeve Bern Berry with a t-shirt promoting the sport which is coming out of the woodwork.

Traffic headache looms for races

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

White water kayakers will be battling the currents in the Barcelona Olympics next year, but the real challenge may be finding enough parking for them at the August 23 and 24 races in Minden. At least 150 racers, 150 "hangers on" and hundreds more spectators will be lining the picturesque Gull River for World Cup races. Any other weekend of the year, however, the Horseshoe Lake Road is a quiet thoroughfare linking farmland and cottage roads. At past races, lack of parking has frayed the nerves of those living near the Minden White Water Preserve and spectators who are accustomed to being able to park alongside the river.

The Minden races are Canada's leg of five annual World Cup competitions held around the world. Volunteer organizer Richard Hofer hopes to have international media coverage. As well, in 1992 for the first time, white water racing will be an Olympic event.

"We chose Minden because this is one of the finest natural race courses," Hofer said in an interview before Thursday's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting. "The others look like concrete sewers. It's the beauty of the area and the well-constructed course which make us think this will become a very popular North American tourist destination."

That's fine and good, council said, but where are you going to put them all. Hofer is trying to get local farmers' permission to turn fields into temporary parking lots, and the municipality will grade the access to a municipal site suitable for parking. Hofer is also meeting with county roads engineer Bill Obee (Horseshoe Lake Road is a county road) and Minden roads superintendent Clayton Cameron to work out any problems before they occur.

The World Cup race is run entirely by volunteers. "We like to think of this as one of the purest sports," says Hofer, a member of the Ottawa River Runners. "There are no sponsors and everyone pays their own way. People do it for the love of the sport, not the money — because there is no money."

For the first time, organizers will ask spectators for a "donation" of $2. In return they'll get a program outlining the schedule, rules "and how to watch the races and enjoy them."

Given the rushing water and backdrop of rocks and forests, the races are often just as thrilling for the spectators, many of whom practise their photography skills. But the sport is just beginning to gain prominence in public perception and is not yet widely popular.

"This is still a very obscure sport," Hofer told council, adding that "I'm very cognizant of the pressures on council. We want to do everything to minimize the problems and maximize the benefits. Complaints are inevitable."

Hofer also assured council that organizers' opinions — which were previously very much against spectators — have now changed.

Meanwhile, they are asking local families to open their homes to accommodate the many racers who will descend on the area in two weeks.

School benefits from recession

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Bad times economically have been good times for the School of Fine Arts.

"We've found the perfect recession-proof industry," says Barb Bolin, the school's director.

This year attendance shot up to 2,010 students, from 1,756 last year.

Attendance has been growing over the past few years, but Bolin says this year's gain is well above the average increase.

People are taking courses instead of going on expensive international holidays.

She also says society has changed, opening the way for more students. "More people think it's okay to change careers half-way through life, and a lot have artistic skills they would like to develop."

But even though many people are turning to art as they grow older, there has been an even bigger increase in young students. "There were at least five students from the Ontario College of Art this year. There were also a lot of professional and semi-professional people, and a lot of art teachers and teachers."

Cellular phone helps victim

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Thursday's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting.

No show

Who said no first, council or the Minden Agricultural Committee? A month ago, an off-hand comment at a council meeting led to council's discussion about the Winged Wheels Motorcycle Club performing on the Main Street during the Haliburton County Fair, which the committee sponsors. Conversation was negative because of the logistics, but council didn't say yes or no because they had yet to formally asked to close the street. Representatives were supposed to meet with council two weeks ago, but cancelled at the last minute, saying council had already made up its mind.

"We did not at any time make a decision to close the Main Street, nor were we requested to, so we did not deny the request," said Councillor Verne Graham at this latest council meeting, adding "Perhaps it was a decision of the senate." Council of course does not have a senate.

Emergency

Cellular telephone transmitters do have their place in the Highlands after all, said Reeve Bern Berry, telling the story about a man who recently had a heart attack at the Minden ball park. Another gentleman used his car phone to reach the Minden OPP office. There was no answer, so he phoned 911, reaching a long-distance exchange which had the service. An ambulance was dispatched and arrived a short time later.

"They don't look like a pine tree but maybe (the transmitter towers) do serve a purpose," Berry said, adding that local emergency telephone numbers will be posted at municipal sites.

Another study

Before Minden can implement development charges, it must spend $5,940 on a study to determine just how much those charges can be. Council approved Lehman and Associates' study outline.

Not in the park

The Haliburton County Snowmobile Association will not be given permission to build a clubhouse near the community centre. "It's not the purpose of parkland to provide accommodation to groups," said Graham. Other councillors said the gun club's former site at the Bobcaygeon Road gravel pit would be more appropriate.

Gypsy moths may peak in '92

The rest is subsidized by the MNR. "We're prepared to leave our present offer on the table to see what will happen," said John Williamson, chief negotiator for the MNR, as the GMMC rejected the offer in an in camera vote.

Williamson insists a compromise can be found and credits five years of co-operation with the GMMC as proof. "We look forward to be able to work together."

This year over 342,000 hectares of defoliation caused by the Gypsy Moth was mapped in Central Ontario, compared to the 77,648 mapped last year. But this could change in 1992.

"We can't accurately predict what will happen with the moths," said Joe Meating, a research scientist with Forestry Canada.

He has been studying the Gypsy Moth invasion since it first appeared in 1981. The moths peaked in 1985 in some areas and decreased severely over the following two years, due to natural causes. Meating suspects this year may have been the peak year for the moths in the Haliburton region. Williamson agreed, adding it's impossible to predict where exactly the moths will flourish. "It's just like the human cold," he said.

No end is in sight for TSW problems waterway's mandate. Times have changed in Haliburton too. It's no longer just logging up here. Some portion of the government needs to look at the system and its use. "Some are well advantaged by the system, others are disadvantaged. The whole system has changed in 86 years. It's out-of-whack. There are many interests, uses to

it. Where do you go to change the system?"

The possible answers, given earlier in a historical outlay and analysis by Jackson, included a number of jurisdictional and constitutional changes, none easily brought about and none much solace to the people on Haliburton lakes.

Hospital swamped by holiday weekend influx

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

On the recent long weekend at the Haliburton Hospital, three helicopters arrived empty and left with emergency patients, 160 people waited an average of four or five hours to have their twisted ankles and upset stomachs treated by a doctor, line-ups sometimes stretched out onto the front lawn, at least 12 people decided their problem really wasn't such an emergency after all and left, and frazzled nurses and doctors simply coped as best they could.

This is what happens when a hospital built to facilitate a winter-time population of approximately 1,500 must cope with the three or four thousand people who come to enjoy the weekend at the cottage.

"It's the fluctuating population and we don't have extra staff for weekends," says Lynne Johnston, a nurse and acting administrator at the Haliburton Hospital in coping during the summers.

"It's the fluctuating population and we don't have extra staff for weekends. We're really staffed the same year 'round," says Lynne Johnston, a nurse and acting administrator.

Unlike hospitals in larger centres, Haliburton nurses must perform all the duties, from doing triage to assess which patients need care first, completing all the paper work, answering the telephone, helping the doctor — and take care of the 10 patients who are admitted for overnight stays.

"It's my bias, but I think nurses bear the brunt of the stress," says Johnston. Last weekend, many of the nurses came in early and left late, and one worked a double shift.

The August long weekend is the worst, she says, because that's when most families seem to take their vacations. Yet many of those who arrive at emergency don't seem to mind the long wait because they're used to it in the city. It's the locals who are accustomed to being seen promptly.

But it's not just accidents and trauma cases which keep the staff so busy. "A lot of the outpatients could be seen in a clinic or doctor's office if they were open."

On weekends, doctors do not have regular office hours so many people with minor problems visit the hospital's emergency department. The five permanent and two summer doctors take turns being on 24-hour call, rotating who has to work on the weekend. Only one doctor is on call a day. (Two local doctors will not participate in the on-call duties.)

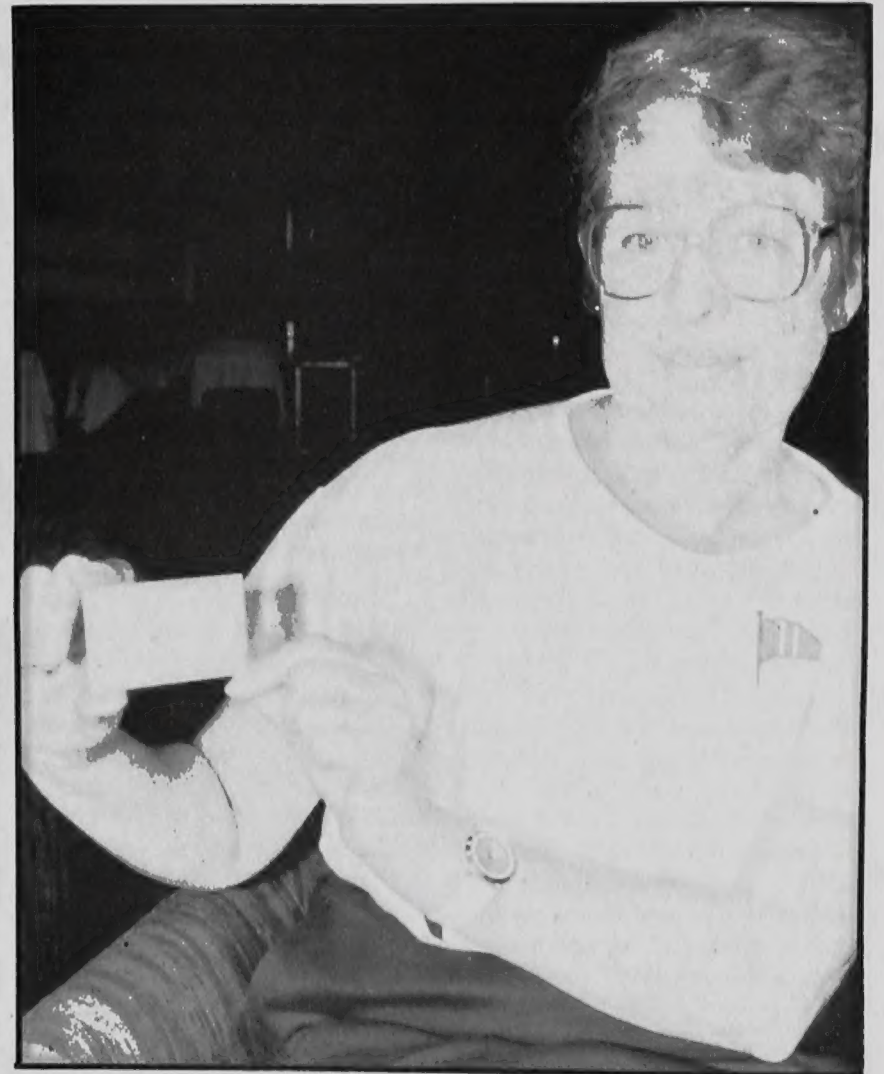

"The last Sunday I was on call I saw 58 patients in 24 hours," says Dr. Karl Hartwick of the Family Medical Centre.

Doctors already work five days a week. He says there aren't enough hours in the week to open on Saturdays, plus be on call for what amounts to an extra 24-hour shift in the summer. "I don't know who would staff the office."

"Summer is pretty exhausting," he says. "You're working that 24-hour shift and generally you're up for all of it. It's probably not a good system but given the small number of us, there really isn't an alternative. It's already at the maximum."

Everything is done to speed up the process. "Nurses are very good at establishing priorities but if you have two or three life threatening situations arise, they'll be put ahead of someone with a twisted ankle."

Once again, at larger hospitals, a patient can be switched to another department, but in Haliburton, doctors must stay with the patient from start to finish, even for the helicopter ride to the city.

AN OFFICIAL CARD HOLDER: PineStone's Rita Baird offers a sample membership card people older than 55 will receive once they join the inn's Prime Time Club. It allows them to use the inn's facilities at a discount.

Stay away kids! Seniors club forms

A new club has formed in the area and those under the age of 55 need not apply.

Called the Prime Time Club, it offers the chance to take advantage of facilities at the PineStone Inn.

"We realized there are a lot of mature people in the area and it was time PineStone did something," says Rita Baird, of the inn's sales office which spearheaded the club in March. It now boasts close to 200 members.

To join, both hotel guests and local residents apply at the inn's front desk. Identification, such as a birth certificate or drivers licence, must be presented proving that person's age.

It costs nothing to join and members are entitled to a 20 per cent discount off food and golf fees and a $25 discount off room rates.

"It's a substantial saving, better than what they will find in the United States which is usually just 15 per cent for mature people," says Baird, who hopes local clubs in the area will take advantage of the Prime Time Club.

For more information, please contact the PineStone Inn's sales office at 457-1800.

SSFC expanding

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Monday's Dysart et al council meeting.

SSFC request

When Home Support moves out of the Drag River Municipal Building, Sir Sandford Fleming College wants to move in. Campus director Barb Bolin says they need more rental space at affordable prices to be more successful at bidding for government-sponsored training programs. This in turn will allow residents to take more courses in Haliburton rather than travelling to outside cities. The campus already owns the former Lakeview school and leases space in the Industrial Park and above Jasco. But even with the kindergarten classes moving back to Victoria Street School, the college needs more classroom and meeting space.

"We want to do anything we can to keep Sir Sandford in the area," said Reeve Bill Davis.

Loosestrife alert

The beautiful but dangerous purple loosestrife will soon be considered a noxious weed in the municipality. "It's a very pretty plant but it just pushes out everything else. Where it takes over in a wetland, it's just like a blanket," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater, who has often argued for wetland preservation. The plant is not widespread in Haliburton County but it is here, and council wants to nip it in the bud before it spreads.

More housing

Council will ask the Ministry of Housing to include renovation projects when it funds the creation of new affordable housing. Builders might be more willing to buy old buildings and convert them, rather than take financial risks with new ones, said Councillor Murray Fearrey. The renovations would create employment.

Berry picking turns into unexpected 25 km hike

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Stephanie Gurnon went berry picking last Thursday morning and ended up taking the scenic route. Almost 10 hours and 25 kilometres later, the exhausted 19-year-old Toronto woman ended what had become a long and sometimes frightening walk along the Peterson Road.

A guest at the Domain of Killien Resort on Drag Lake, Gurnon left the lodge just before noon, with the intention of walking the 3.5 kilometres to Delphis Lake, part of the Domain's 5,000 acres. She had skied to the lake in winter, but became disoriented and went instead to Ritchie Lake, also on the Domain's property.

From here she linked up with the Peterson Road, which cuts through the Domain property. Not wearing a watch, she eventually realized she was off course. She kept walking because "she figured she had more distance behind her than in front of her," says Jean Edouard Larcade, one of the resort's owners.

"She had the dog of the lodge with her so she wasn't afraid at first, but as it started getting late, she figured she should walk faster. By that time she was entering Algonquin Provincial Park."

Eventually she hit the paved road north of Harcourt. She flagged down a passing car, told the woman her dilemma and asked to be driven to a phone. The woman, however, drove away, leaving Gurnon to continue her walk.

It was with great relief she arrived at Pine Grove Point, a resort owned by the Danylyshen family. The Danylyshens quickly welcomed her and prepared a meal while Gurnon phoned the lodge to say she was alright.

"My first question was 'Did you find the berries?'" Larcade says lightheartedly, "and her answer was 'Yes, but I ate them all.'"

Meanwhile, Larcade had returned to the lodge at six o'clock, and hearing Gurnon had not yet returned, did one of his regular searches of the property by Jeep. When there was still no sign of her, he used the portable phone to ask the lodge to phone the Minden OPP and Lyle Bacon, the Domain's maintenance person. Bacon also owns Erik's Taxi and his wife Beverley phoned friends and firemen to gather at the lodge to form a search party.

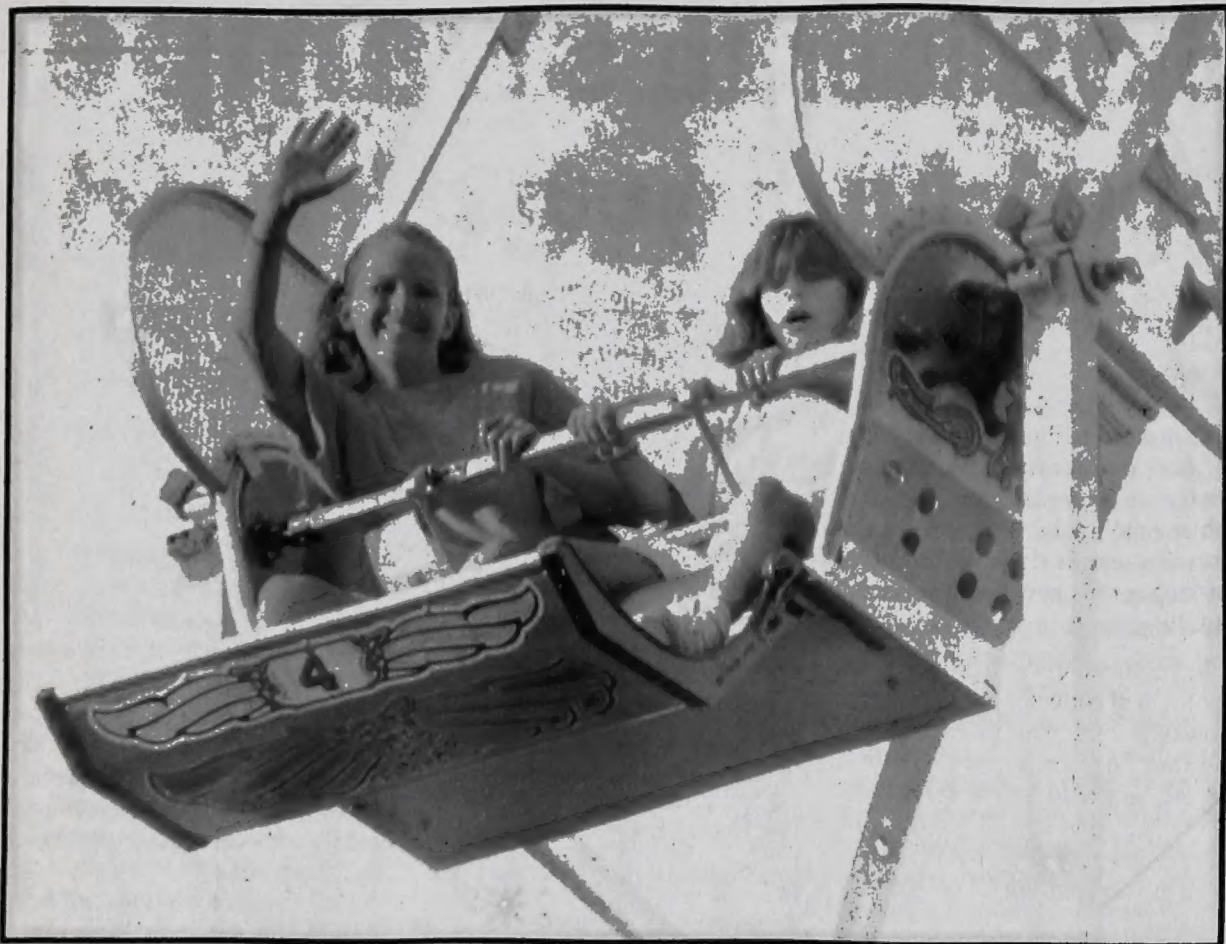

By 9:30, approximately 30 people, including the Parish, Chambers and Wilson families of Drag Lake, and neighbour Jack Roberts, were equipped with lights, whistles and walking sticks to begin the search.

Larcade says he and his brother Dante didn't expect such a warm and generous reaction. "It's in these times you can know who your friends are," they told the gathered group.

Just as the search parties were leaving, Gurnon phoned. As someone went to pick her up, the Larcades arranged an impromptu wine and cheese party for the volunteers to show their appreciation. "Some people said it was the best party and asked when the next search party would be," Jean Edouard laughs.

He is also grateful for the hospitality and comfort the Danylyshens provided Gurnon.

When the young Toronto woman finally arrived back from her berry picking adventure, she was tired and overwhelmed by the response. They took out a map to show her just how far she had walked. It's a trip she's not likely to make again soon.

UP, UP AND AWAY! Kerri Couchman and Candice Bradbury wave a friendly hello from the ferris wheel high above the Haliburton crowds at the Annual Rotary Carnival midway on Wednesday.

Vandals scourge Cardiff in night-time mischief

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Vandals ran rampant in Cardiff two weeks ago, breaking windows and uprooting gardens.

On the night of August 2, 30 windows were smashed by rocks at the Cardiff Public School, resulting in damages of $2,275.

Also that same night, vandals tore pieces of aluminum siding off the Cardiff Legion. Private gardens in the village were also raided, and plants were scattered around the townsite. Apsley OPP are investigating and have several suspects.

In an unrelated incident, Minden OPP are investigating a break and enter last week at home on Burke's Road near Haliburton village. Sometime between August 5 and 6, thieves broke into a house and made off with $5,000 worth of jewelry and electronic equipment. Items lifted include antique cuff links, an antique watch and gold rings. Also stolen were two portable stereos and a CD player.

Minden OPP are also investigating a second break-in sometime between August 8 and 9 in Minden. Thieves tossed a tractor battery through a window at North Shore Lawn and Garden and made off with $13,000 worth of lawn equipment. Included were 18 lawnmowers, 15 chainsaws, 10 lawn trimmers and one lawn blower. The police have no suspects.

In another incident, Minden OPP have charged a Haliburton man for disturbing the peace.

Lorne Cummings, 50, was arrested Sunday on Highland Street in Haliburton for making threats, carrying a concealed weapon, breaking his parole and assaulting a police officer. Most will recognize Cummings as the flute player outside the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Haliburton.

Bird droppings drown beach in a disgusting sea of filth

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

They say birds of a feather flock together. But it seems the seagulls at Rotary Beach are doing more than just flocking, and the sorry sight of it has some residents talking.

"When I returned from a vacation on the long weekend in August I was almost brought to tears to see the state of our lovely beach," says Pastor Brian Plouffe in a letter to The Echo last week.

"... The beach and dock and raft have been terribly polluted by unsightly and unhealthy bird droppings... Surely we could spare a the manpower to have the municipality clean the beach area daily... What kind of message are we giving our summer visitors concerning Haliburton?"

Dysart et al clerk-administrator Donna McCallum says the beach was cleaned twice last week by the parks department.

"We've never had a complaint before this year. It's the first year we've had a problem with it," says McCallum. "As soon as we're made aware of it, we clean it up."

Meanwhile, the Fish and Wildlife clerk at the Ministry of Natural Resources in Minden says there are no more seagulls at the beach this summer than there were last summer.

"It's quite likely there's a food source for them in that area, such as garbage, and they may be landing on the dock and leaving a mess," says Dave Camelon.

"God has given us a beautiful part of this world to live and work in," says Pastor Plouffe. "Surely with all the concern over keeping our world 'green' we can do a better job of keeping our beach 'clean'."

SkySlider to stay open for 5 years

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The SkySlider will remain on the hill behind Haliburton village for the next five years, but instead of paying the $1.5-million required to replace the tracks, the owner then plans to tear it down to provide parking for his new social services building.

In his most recent proposal to Dysart et al council Monday, Steve Bowskill said that to create the number of required parking spaces, he would have to tear down the water slide and SkySlider office, effectively shutting down the business and putting 25 people out of work.

The 11-year-old SkySlider is only expected to last another five years before needing a complete re-haul. So Bowskill is suggesting that he go ahead and build phase two of Hillside House on his property, pave a portion of the municipal road allowance for parking, and wait until SkySlider needs to be torn down before making room for 25 more parking spots on the property.

Dysart had previously insisted that all of development, including parking, be restricted to Bowskill's land.

"Many people will ask 'What if he doesn't (stick to the plan)?'," Bowskill said. "Obviously Steve Bowskill is going to continue to develop and you're not going to issue me permits for anything (unless I live up to the terms of agreement)."

"In the meantime, I'll pave the road allowance at no cost to the taxpayer, SkySlider is in place and we have a new building which creates five jobs."

Bowskill had first planned to make the building into condominiums, but the Ministry of Environment said the municipality would then have to assume responsibility for water supply failure, which the municipality didn't want to do. Bowskill is now in negotiations with the Children's Aid Society to perhaps sell the building on the condition he rents the third floor.

"It seems to be we're closer now to an agreement," said Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater. "My main concern is I'd feel badly if we entered into an agreement that didn't work out — suppose you get hit by a truck, or something happens."

"Keep in mind what's hanging in the balance," Bowskill replied. Council has yet to respond to the request.

Cottagers disturbed by Hart Lodge plan

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Mountain Lake and 12 Mile Lake cottagers will be involved in the planning of a 50-lot development behind Hart Lodge.

Deciding that the devil they know is probably better than the devil they don't, the lake residents picked up on a suggestion by a representative of Granite Resorts to form a committee to discuss concerns around the development.

At Saturday's meeting at Hart Lodge, the issue of extra docking and boats on the lake came up again and again in questions from cottagers.

The plan includes making a small number of docks available to the lot owners, to allow them free water access.

But instead of trying to completely stop the development, the cottagers decided to work from the inside.

"Isn't it better to work with them? We can be pro-active now," said Bob Hurrell, president of the Mountain Lake cottagers' association. "But if the Granite Group walks the development can still happen. The way to work is control. If it's done properly then it might be all-right. We've been invited to co-operate, and if we don't we may pay a tremendous price."

The committee of local people and company representatives can only advise in the development. It would have no legal power over the development.

The proposal, advanced by Hart Lodge's parent company, sees a series of up to 50 lots behind the resort being sold in minimum one-acre sizes.

The lots are more than 1,000 feet back from the shores of both Mountain and 12 Mile Lakes, but at the Saturday meeting, set up by the company, representative Bill Wakefield suggested a few docks would be built on Hart Lodge shoreline so that residents of the lots could get onto the lakes.

This suggestion was the most contentious at the meeting, with many cottagers saying the lakes are already very busy, and adding 50 lots would only worsen the condition. "What I'd like to see is no launch at all," said one. "If they have a boat they have to pay $3 (at the marina) to get it on the lake. It's a limit. But what if someone doesn't have a lot here and sees the dock and uses it, because that's what's going to happen."

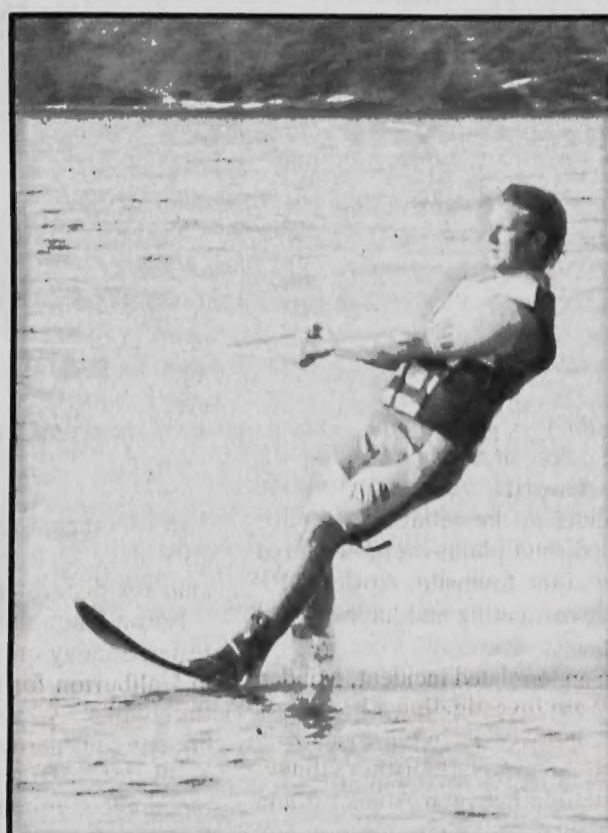

But Wakefield, who was careful to not bind the company to anything firm, said he would not want the development to be without docks, since it would make it much more difficult to sell the lots.

He said originally the plan was

Lawyers fight hint of registry move

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Local lawyers and politicians are joining forces to ensure the province continues to fund a registry office in Haliburton County.

"(We have) a concern, and even a fear, that in the name of 'efficiency', various ministries may be considering changes to the service of this county that would be not only prejudicial to ourselves and our staff, but would as well be prejudicial to our clients," says a letter to Premier Bob Rae by local lawyers David Bishop, Fraser Rogers, Don Finn, Ray Selbie, Brian Adamson and David Shapiera.

In the wake of recent amalgamations of registry offices, there have been rumours that the county's registry office in Minden would be shut and people would have to travel to Lindsay to search land titles. (Titles tell you who owns the land, when it was purchased, whether there's a mortgage and who's supplying it, and whether there are any liens.)

There is more money generated at the Minden office than it costs to keep the office open, the lawyers say. Each year there are approximately 8,000 new registrations "which deal with financial transactions of land transfers in the amount of $94-million and financial transactions (mortgages, etc.) in the amount of $43,000,000."

Real estate transactions have slowed down in the recession, but the lawyers are confident things will pick up again.

If changes are made, this would "create an inefficiency as to costs incurred by the government, costs incurred by the practitioners, and costs incurred by the public who engage solicitors to conduct searches and files on their behalf."

On any given day, several law office employees can be found at the office. They would not look forward to the cost or inconvenience of having to drive an hour away to Lindsay.

The issue has already been raised at county council, and at Thursday's Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting, the note of urgency was repeated.

"The erosion of our services is rapidly coming upon us," said Reeve Bern Berry who "raised the red flag" at county council. "Maybe we should get a public outcry or we're going to lose our courts and our registry office. I think they're on the line, even though (the province) says no."

"If we don't raise the hue and cry, we will lose these services," added Deputy-reeve Mike Maher.

The lawyers are also asking for a Sheriff's sub-office in Minden staffed by one person who can work on the computer the Ministry of the Attorney General has promised, take the information, access the data bank, and produce certificates and abstracts upon submission of the information and search names.

Lawyers estimate the revenue generated would be at least

At the polls

From the Victoria Day weekend to Thanksgiving, it's hard not to be aware of how blessed we are to have so many healthy lakes and forests, and why it is so important to protect them. Not that they become any less important during the winter, but the centre of our preoccupation shifts from the lake to the arena, curling rink or neighbour's living room. Likewise, after spending a summer revelling in the enjoyment of the cottage, most cottagers return to the city and once again become immersed in city life and all that entails — work, school, social commitments. The cottage is always in the back of their minds but weeks can sometimes stretch into months between visits.

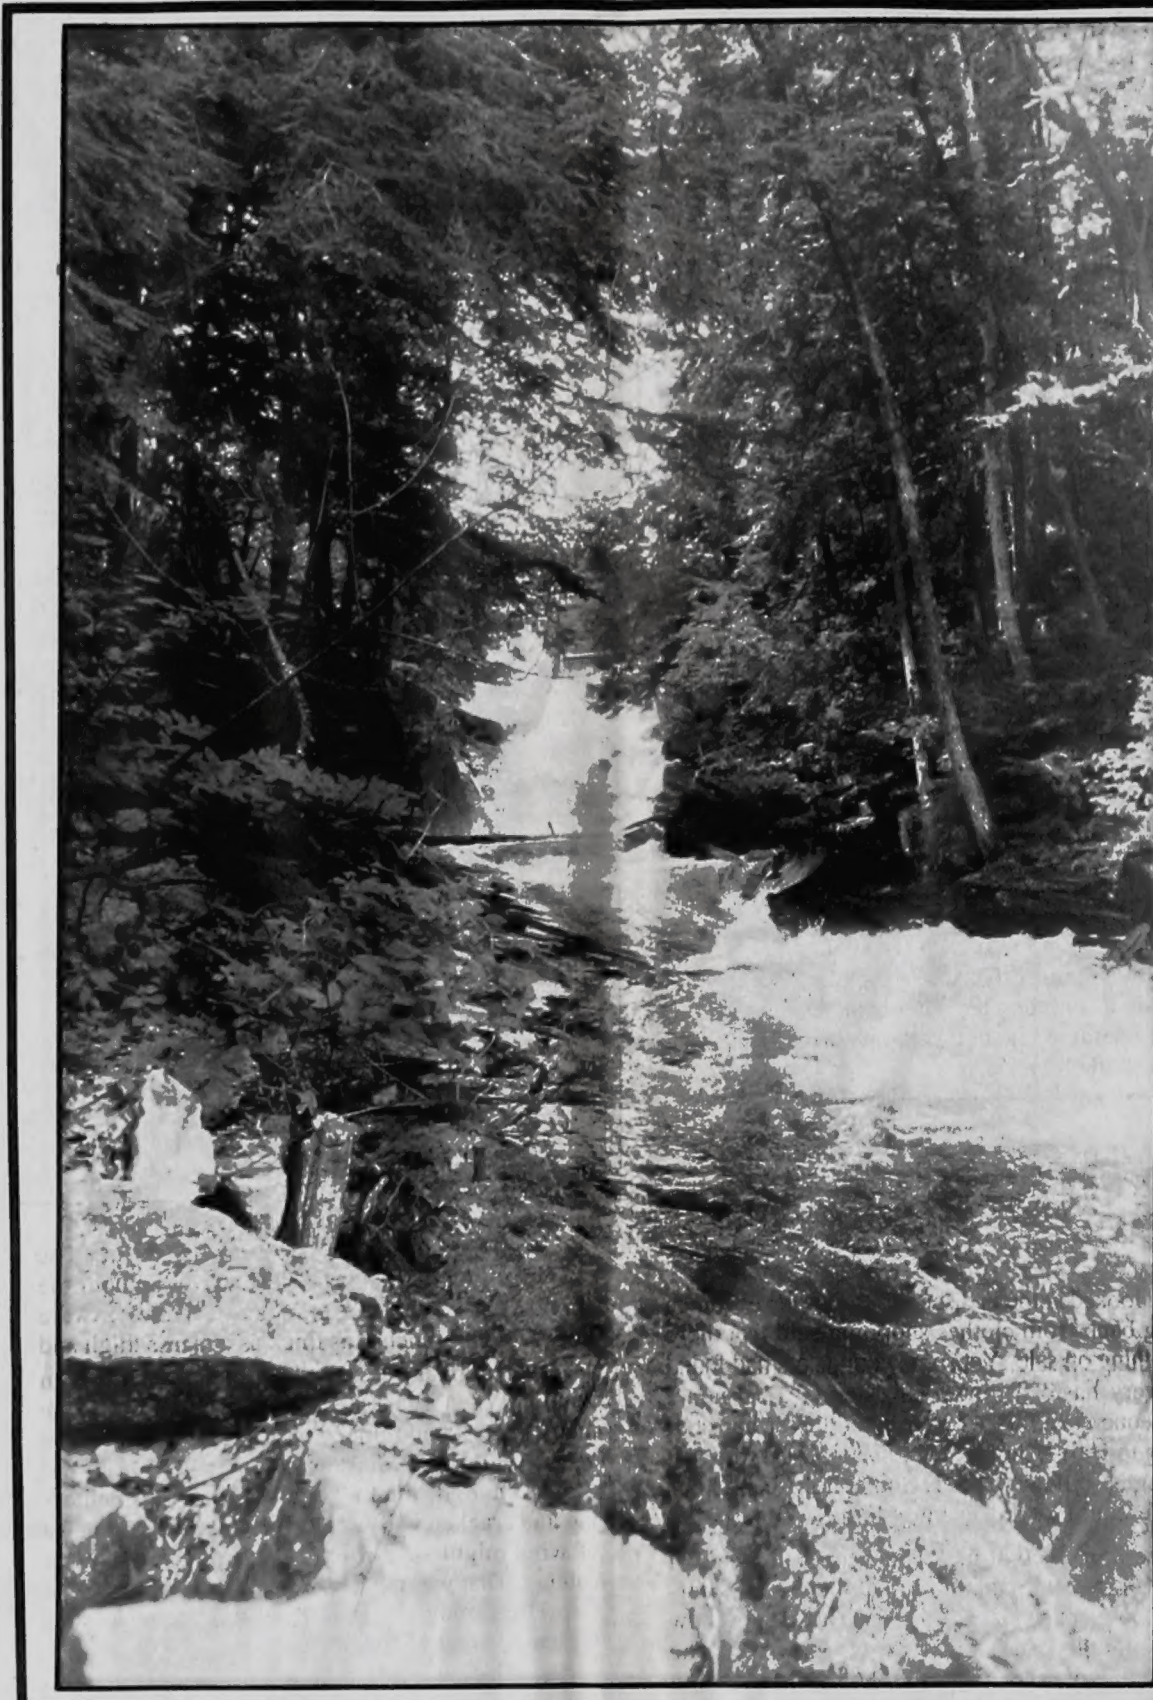

This year, cottage associations want summer's enthusiasm to last until November's municipal elections. Tired of complaining about taxes or services only after the deed is done — or undone — they want to play a more active role in choosing who will represent them in the local political forum. This can only be applauded. In past years, less than five per cent of municipal voters have been cottagers, even though they make up, in some municipalities, half the names on the tax rolls. Always eager to complain at cottage association meetings or amongst themselves, cottagers are an uncommon sight at council meetings, even in the summer. Last winter, Horseshoe Lake tried to have a representative at each Anson, Hindon and Minden council meeting, but this didn't last. Between the isolated debates about contentious issues, they realized there are a lot of boring parts: road severances, donation requests, tenders for new trucks. Three or four cottagers have been regular observers these past few months, but they're the exception among the county's 10 municipalities.

Minden council was therefore somewhat skeptical when Bob Hurtle, representing the AHM Ratepayers Association, a coalition of 13 lake associations in the municipality, asked council to exercise its right to hold a third advanced poll. Law dictates that an advanced poll be held on a Saturday and Wednesday before the election, but the coalition wants an extra Saturday thrown in. Balking at the extra cost of approximately $1,000 — or was it the thought of a thousand cottagers flexing their franchise — council was skeptical. Citing poor past performances on election day, what assurances did council have that cottagers were indeed going to make the two-and-a-half hour drive north to put their X on the ballot?

There's no doubt that cottagers are becoming more politically and environmentally aware, and with good cause. It's also a welcome sight that they want to become more involved in all aspects of Highlands life. They are an important and integral part of the community here, albeit mainly in the summer, and their voice should be heard when decisions are being made. Minden council, and any other council which is requested, should demonstrate their willingness for a two-way line of communication by granting the extra polling date. This year. Then it's the cottage association's job to rally the troops and justify the accommodation of their needs. All too often, association executives sadly are preaching to the converted, voicing the opinions of the small percentage — the five per cent who'd make the two-and-a-half hour drive to vote anyway — of people who accept that you can only complain if you get involved.

But lake associations must also give a little in return. It's distressing to see associations' wholesale endorsement of cottager candidates simply because the candidate is a cottager. How would they like it if local residents said they would only vote for locals? The whole point of elections is remove prejudice and choose the best people for the job, whether they be cottager or local resident, or, to repeat a well-worn phrase, black or white, male or female, Christian or Hindu. Cottagers can destroy a lake or raise taxes just as easily as a local resident. Permanent residents can be just as concerned about protecting our best resource: cottaging. Maybe November '91 can be the beginning of the end of the barriers which divide "us versus them", because really, we're all in this together. M.P.

Echo biased against Reformers

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

I, along with many others, are very concerned about your bias shown publicly towards those who have taken a faith stand against the "Ordination of Practising Homosexuals."

We are also saddened at your acts of discrimination against the Reformed Church of Canada re Gooderham and Highland Grove. If this is not so, then please explain to me and to the public, why you have refused to print two articles, one presented by myself in 1990, and one presented by Mr. Glen Madill, an Elder, in the spring of 1991, and why you have shown such insensitivity to the difficult situation in the communities of Gooderham, Wilberforce and Highland Grove, by the manner of your wording in the feature article on the "United Church novice is helping to heal the wounds that run deep," July 30th issue?

We welcome anyone who is willing to help the many people who have been hurt on both sides of the "H" issue, but when you bring this issue into the funeral that Miss McGee officiated at, and do not state that the Reformed Church of Gooderham ladies worked together with the United Church to provide lunch, you misled the readers and you create divisions that are not there.

You have sadly misled the readers of the Echo by stating Maurice Bradley led people to break away from the United Church. First of all, let me share with you that the people I serve are not dumb sheep to be led by the nose, but are intelligent, loving people with a strong Christian faith, capable of making their own decisions. At an official board meeting in the fall of 1990 a vote was taken with 26 out of 31 in favor of leaving the United Church and its policy. That represented a large majority of the three churches.

For you or Rev. Jim Phelps to suggest that this was a community development problem is like an ostrich sticking its head in the sand.

In the mid-1960s, when I first became an employee of the United Church, homosexuality was considered a sin, (still is according to scripture). They also instructed that we should make note of questions that came to mind, but avoid passing opinions for the first six months, at which time you would likely understand many of the problems and avoid making foolish mistakes. It is obvious that both policies have changed.

However, I do agree with Miss McGee when she state that many people are looking for black and white statements, understandings of good and evil. The world may very well be made up of the many shades of grey. It is obvious as we look to our court system, our government leadership and to churches who no longer believe in the scriptures because it does not condone some of the life-styles that people live, but the scriptures will teach you about black and white, good and evil. The Holy Scriptures are not grey, but tell us that churches and people who build upon immoral and unethical shifting sands are against the teaching of Jesus who said build on a rock. God sent his Son into the world to bring us out of the darkness. Those who seek grey or darkness rather than light do so because their deeds are evil (John 3:19).

You and Miss McGee speak of healing taking place in the divided communities. First of all, the communities are not divided; secondly, the healing, if it is taking place, is with the small minority who remain in the United Church of Wilberforce and Gooderham. Thanks to your article and your insensitivity many wounds have been reopened making it more difficult to live and work together, but by the Grace of God we will do that as a community, providing we have no more outside interference.

It is my hope that in the future, you will stop and give some careful thought to all people before you hastily put your pen and your bias to print without knowing the whole story.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

FOR SOME TIME NOW I have maintained that visitors who come back to the Highlands of Haliburton are looking for something to do and they want to be entertained. At one time I was of the opinion, that when visitors arrived for the summer they were so glad to get away from the rat race in the big city, they would head straight for the cottage and stay there until their holidays were over. We find that at the present time this is not the case. Some vacationers do like to spend most of their time around the lake, enjoying cottage life, while others like to hit the road, drive into town, do some shopping, while others are satisfied just to browse around. This past week Midnight Madness, the Rotary Carnival and Bluegrass show that they want to be entertained.

Each and every year I like to give my opinion and thoughts on the Haliburton Rotary Club parade. This year will be no exception. In my opinion the crowd was down both at the parade and later on the midway. The parade itself was a bit shorter than usual but the floats, marching units and bands blended together to make it a real crowd pleaser with both old and young alike. They say there's something about a parade that sends chills up and down your spine, and I have to agree. The parade's the thing. There is one way to make the parade bigger and better next year and that is for all of us to start thinking about putting in an entry come next August.

I would like to join in with friends and show-goers in offering my congratulations and best wishes to Molly and Lou Consky who are celebrating 50 years in show business. Yes I can remember back 50 years when the Molou Theatre first opened on the main street in Haliburton. I was there on opening night and I can still remember seeing the beautiful flowers that lined the front of the stage. There among the dignitaries was the Premier of Ontario Leslie M. Frost and the MP at that time Bruce McNeven. After the theatre opened I joined my friends in going to the show every night of the week. It was a real novelty. I have known Molly and Lou personally for many years and have been in their home on many occasions going over their advertisement for the coming weeks' paper. They are a lovely couple who have made a host of friends since they moved here. Show business is in their blood and I hope that they never retire from their present business, as the movie industry just wouldn't be the same without them.

It's that time of the year once again and time for the annual Haliburton County Fair which will be held in Minden at the Fairgrounds this coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 16, 17, 18. The big Fall fair this year will feature something for young and old including Conklins Midway, a parade, heavy horse show, cattle and sheep show, grandstand show, dance, heavy horse draw and many other attractions including tractor pull, and 4x4 truck pull, talent contest, kids day events, horseshoe contest and much, much more.

The village of Haliburton has another municipal parking lot. Just recently municipal employees along with their equipment were in the area of the Rails' End Gallery on York Street levelling off and smoothing down the sand in preparation for the paving operation. Last week the paving trucks were in town and now the lot has been freshly paved and white lines have been painted on the pavement making room for 24 parking spaces.

Each year the Rotary Club of Haliburton holds an auction sale night for their members and their wives. Just recently it was Auction Sale night once again at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall and they tell me that the profit was a staggering $9,220.00.

David Guiliano, son of Bob and Betty Guiliano has a very interesting article in the August edition of the United Church Observer. Guiliano is the minister at St. John's United Church in Marathon, Ontario.

A few leftover notes . . . Paul and Donna Thain of Winnipeg, Manitoba are visiting with relatives in the village . . . Stuart Baker completed his first day of retirement on Thursday, August 1. The former director of Education was the guest speaker at the Rotary Club of Haliburton's weekly meeting on that same evening . . . Fred and Doris Greer of Peterborough, Ontario were recent visitors to the village of Haliburton . . . Art Ward was in Toronto recently and attended one of the Blue Jays - Detroit Tigers baseball game at the SkyDome . . . John and Wendy Gunning of Haliburton Commercial Printers were on holidays last week . . . Jim and Marion Green of Toronto are visiting here with friends and relatives.

POINTS OF VIEW

From virgules to octothorpes

LAST WEEK, writing about Johnny Cowell, I mentioned the record label "Amperand," that curly little symbol that I referred to as the "& sign." That's because I've found that a lot of people aren't familiar with its proper name.

My very first fulltime job was as a compositor on a daily newspaper, back in the days when everything that was printed was first created in "hot metal," the metal being mostly lead.

Part of the trade was to become familiar with a variety of typefaces on sight, and often one of the identifying characteristics of a given font was the shape and style of the ampersand.

The ampersand is one of the oldest symbols used as an abbreviation, going back to Roman times. It was invented by one Marcus Tiro, a freed slave and secretary to Cicero, a Roman statesman, orator and author.

Tiro's job was to take down Cicero's dictation, and since he talked fast, Tiro created the world's first form of shorthand, including the ampersand.

The & itself was just a quick way of writing "et," which means "and" in Latin, and ampersand is a corruption of the term "and per se and," which means "as follows."

These days, a lot of firms don't like using the "&" in their corporate names, but I think they are missing a chance for some real character in the design.

My early training in the newspaper composing room in Kitchener eventually led to jobs in Toronto advertising agencies, where I started off in the production department. The ability to figure out how much of a given typeface in a certain size would fit in the available space in a magazine or newspaper advertisement was a skill that helped me get into the field I wanted — one where there were a lot more applications for jobs than there were positions.

Art directors would specify the particular type and I would be expected to arrange for it through one of the many type houses who kept hundreds of fonts available — often providing it overnight for clients who always seemed to be a little behind in their approvals...

The guys we dealt with at the type houses were the real experts, and if you started off thinking you knew all about it, they gradually taught you how little you actually did.

It was from these expert insiders that I got to know what an octothorpe and a virgule looked like, to say nothing of how to use the asterisk. Virgule is the proper name for the oblique line that looks like this, / and is used to divide things you still want to express together. I used it for over twenty years of my life in the trademark for 590/CKEY.

The asterisk and the octothorpe have been made famous by the fact that the telephone company chose to adopt these two symbols for use on the pushbutton phone when they changed over from the rotary dial. You can do a lot of electronic tricks with them.

I think everyone is familiar with the former, which has been used for generations to denote that there is a footnote below, providing more information. It also often gets a workout as a simple form of type ornament breaking up sections of a story.

You get the idea. The octothorpe, on the other hand was more familiar to most of us as the "pound" sign. I don't know where the formal name came from, although the "octo" part is obviously a reference to the eight points. I can only guess that someone named Thorpe came up with either the concept itself — or just the name...

These days there isn't a single daily newspaper printed in Ontario using "hot metal," the last one being the Lindsay Post, and I doubt if there are any weeklies left either. Virtually everyone now "sets type" by typing stories on a computer.

Another computer takes the information about how big and how wide you want it to appear, and the machine makes it fit for you.

I still love to conjure with type, but frankly I'm glad I moved out of that job in the old "hot metal" composing room long ago. It's gone the way of the elevator operator, the buggy whip maker, and a lot of other skilled trades...

PIC OF THE PAST

Many of you will remember when Dr. Speck had a medical practice in the village of Haliburton. His office was in the former Dr. H.E. Good building across from the Post office. It was torn down to make way for a new building for Westside Jug City and General Lees. Dr. Speck is shown here on the right sitting in the cutter in this 1920 photo with the horse called Polly which he used in the winter to make house calls until the early 1930's. Dr. and Mrs. John T. Speck came to Haliburton in the spring of 1925 in a model T Coupe and stayed here until December 2, 1945 when they moved to Cooksville, Ontario. Dr. Speck later on became a railway doctor, coroner and a mason. Photo is courtesy of his two sons Bell and Jack Speck who went to school here until they moved to Cooksville.

Expensive way to save money

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

IT HAD BEEN a bad wind storm. The hydro had been off for over an hour the night before. Cottage driveways were littered with branches as thick as a man's thigh and several marginal trees had been snapped in the high winds. When Mark's father told him about the maple, Mark had jumped in his pickup immediately for a look see himself.

Sure enough, the tree had been hit with lightning and cracked half way down. Another good gust of wind might send it tumbling right onto Mark's cottage. That was the last thing he could afford right then. He stood there looking at the tree and trying to decide what to do.

His father walked up behind him. "Maybe you should phone Ontario Hydro. That tree is pretty close to their lines. Maybe they'll come out and take care of it for you, Mark," said the older man, wanting to help. After a pause, Mark shook his head.

"They'll not do it for free, you can be sure of that, dad. No, I think I'll give it a whirl myself. I've cut down plenty of trees before. This one shouldn't be much different." But Mark's father didn't share this confidence and pointed out that on one side was the cottage and on the other, the hydro lines. Mark shrugged off his worries with the assurance of youth and walked up the hill for his chainsaw.

Mark's cottage sat at the top of a hill overlooking the lake. A road separated the hill from the water. The struck maple was about halfway up the hill. Mark figured if he notched it right, the tree should fall straight down, lining up with the side of his driveway and well clear of anything else. As he pulled the cord on the saw, it started to rain.

He had no trouble cutting through the wood. Just when he thought she was ready to go, he quickly stepped back out of the way, leaving his chainsaw still lodged in the tree. But he had miscalculated. To his surprise and horror, instead of falling straight down, the tree fell backwards. For a split second it seemed as though the entire world hung suspended, waiting to see where the tree would land. It careened straight into the hydro lines, coming to rest like a fiddle bow interrupted in mid-song.

Sparks flashed and sputtered where the tree had connected with the wires. Mark stepped up to remove his saw and felt a jolt the minute he touched it. Looking up, he saw smoke as the electricity continued to short into the wood. The drizzling rain only helped to make the tree a good conductor and the electricity was passing from the wires down the tree and right into the ground.

Despite the shock, Mark wrestled his chainsaw free and stood watching with his father as the smoke turned to flame. In no time at all the wires had burned right through, sending the tree tumbling down across the road and bringing the wires with it. One of these, still live with electricity, twisted and crackled across the road, moving with every breeze in the damp morning air.

Mark knew that the power must be off in at least half the cottages on the lake. There would be a lot of unhappy cottagers doing without their coffee this morning. But the big concern right now was the live wire arching its way over a travelled road. Because it was early on a rainy Sunday morning, no cars had

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

THE ECHO was very interesting last week. It seems that half the paper was devoted to how many things there are to do here this summer. The other half was given to reporting the grumbings and horrors of the cost of living here.

We spent the previous weekend mingling with a group of tourists, mainly from around the province of Ontario. There were also a couple who were born in Bracebridge, but were now living in Florida. Most of these people have been vacationing in Haliburton for a good many years. Their view of our financial atmosphere is about as broad as their stay is short.

They firmly believe, for instance, that the prices all go up when tourist season opens. When I mentioned that many of the local residents are convinced that prices only do down for the tourist season, they all looked at me in disbelief. A couple of women coming back from clothes shopping said that there was nothing on sale. Yet some youngsters had found some very basic fishing gear at quite a bargain.

Someone asked us why we would ever consider moving to Haliburton from the States when the cost of living is so much higher. Someone else asked us how we could afford to buy clothes.

Please don't yell at me! These are comments of tourists. I tried to explain to them how many merchants complain about high rents. We also know how high building costs and property taxes are. The tourists weren't listening. All they are interested in is that the fact that the cost of goods in Haliburton is so high, in their opinion, is the reason why they aren't spending money here.

The peculiar thing is that almost every day this summer the downtown stretch of Haliburton is, what us residents call a 'zoo'. Even on the warmest days, it's wall to wall people. They must be spending some money. And Midnight Madness seems to have been a rousing success. It was certainly impossible to drive through it. The tax revolt was the thing. I gather Stedmans could have easily sold thirty dozen anti-Mulroney shirts.

So, where did they get the poor schnooks who actually stood up in front of news cameras at the Tory convention and said, "I believe in the G.S.T."?

MORE LETTERS

FROM ECHO READERS...

To the Editor:

Once again, the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts must thank the Echo for its articles covering Guild fund raisers, events and exhibitions.

In the August 5th edition, an article was published about our most successful Art Auction, held at PineStone Inn on August 1st. I would like to bring to the readers' attention, two important pieces of information which were incorrect:

a) all proceeds of the Art Auction assist with the operating costs of the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts. While the Haliburton School of Fine Arts is a most valuable supporter of our Art Auction, it does not benefit from the proceeds.

b) the get-away package valued at $720 at Deerhurst Inn was donated by Steve Bowskill, not Deerhurst Inn.

The Guild is most grateful to supporters of our annual, summer fundraising functions; the Summer Sale and the Art Auction. It is through the continued support of our extended community, both permanent and seasonal, that we may continue to offer a thriving cultural centre to the public.

To the Editor:

It was gratifying to read that Mary Mysyk and the council came to a settlement.

In these times, when the council is preaching restraint, they seemed to miscalculate the $20,000 settlement from their budget.

We could guess that they saved some money by not paying for a clerk. However, I don't think that it amounted to $20,000 and the legal fees that they incurred, on our behalf.

I would hope, because of the honesty and fair play that our council is supposed to project to us, that any money they didn't "claw back" would appropriately come out of pockets of those councillors who voted to dismiss Mary Mysyk.

It would be appreciated if the council could disclose exactly what the costs were including lost revenues and interest from tax bills not received.

Haliburton Forest an asset

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

A SENSE OF PANIC occurred August 8 when on my way to Peterborough, every fourth or fifth tree showed signs of turning colour. Many had already completely turned. It just doesn't seem fair. August always seems to be the quiet month, the one in which summer slowly drifts away from us. A place where I have come to enjoy August's leisurely pace is Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve. Trout fisherman (except the diehards) have given up, and the bugs are for the most part gone, leaving only the katydids with their late summer hum.

The Wildlife Reserve is a unique and vital part of the Haliburton experience. Muskoka may be known for its long-established cachet of lodges and boats, the Trent for its locks, but Haliburton offers that feel of wilderness that comes right up to your back door. Haliburton county needs a place like the Wildlife, with its 50,000 acres and over 50 lakes and rivers, to preserve something that is quickly being lost to the surveyors' stakes and the subdivision's plan. It is a place where a lake can exist for its own beauty and not for the potential of how many lots can be squeezed out for maximum profit.

Development, especially controlled development, is fine and necessary. However, I think we must find and help keep places that exist as close to nature as possible, that recognize that we are visitors passing through, and not owners with the right to bulldoze and landscape to the water edge. If we, as Haliburtons, don't have places that we can see, feel, hear, and smell the nature that surrounds us, then the purpose of living here is lost and becomes no different than living in Ajax or Mississauga.

The scope and variety within the Reserve strains the imagination. I'll never forget hiking into Powderhorn Lake. There is a certain mystery about coming onto a lake that is undeveloped, where it seems that today you are the only one for which that lake exists. Powderhorn's long beach, all trees, and tundra-like meadow leave any visitor quickly in awe. You find yourself whispering as if you were in Church.

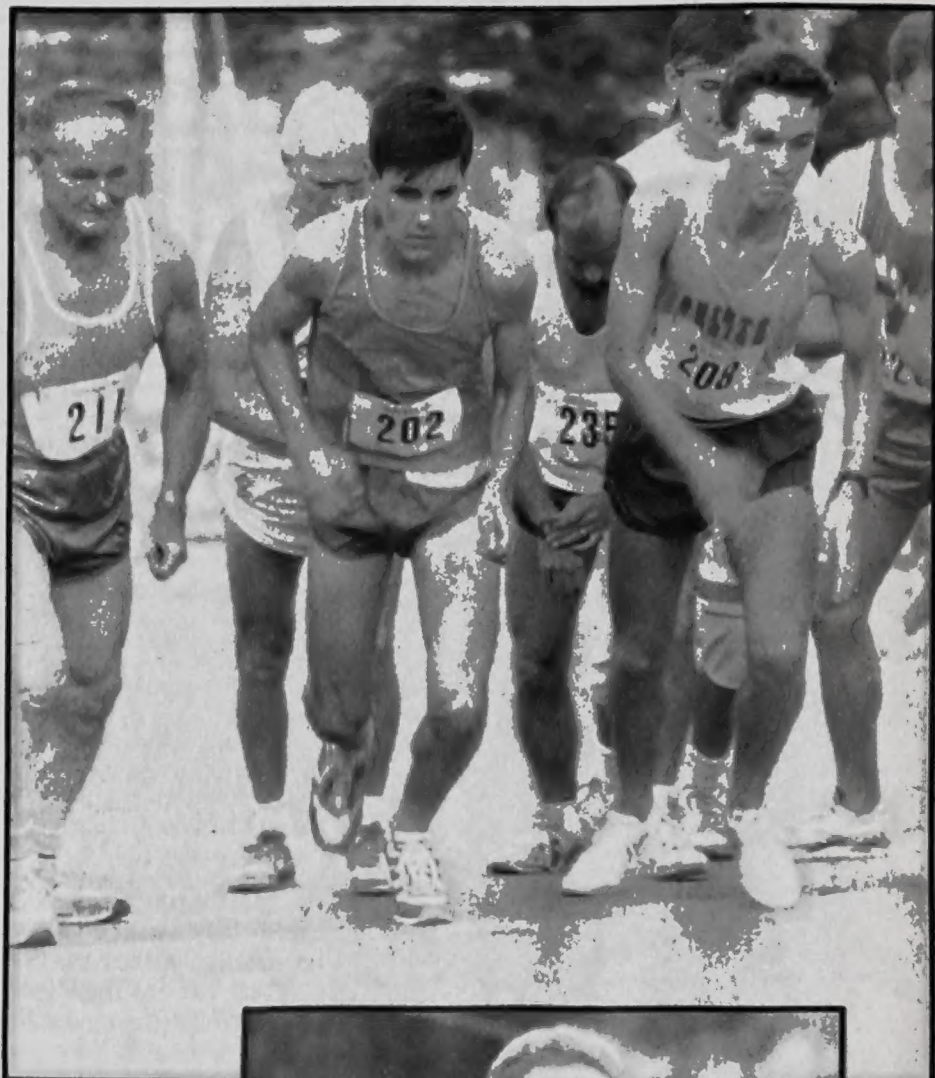

The past several summers have found us camped on Wildcat Lake. We have seen the sun go down through the pines, found the Little Dipper and Orion's Belt, and woke up startled in the night by the wolves calling back and forth across the end of the lake.

Again, you are reminded that you are the visitor, or at best the caretaker responsible to not disturb anything, always cautious to leave it for the next generation which will pass through.

There is always something to do, whether it is exploring the myriad of trails on a mountain bike, hiking to the lookout or catching a lecture by R. D. Lawrence at the log Boiler Room at the Base Camp. The Reserve should be commended for attempting to preserve, in a modern age, a multi-use facility with an overall criteria that it must be environmentally sound. Keep it up. We and our future children need to know there is a place where wilderness and people can meet.

SPORTS

Runners on your marks, get set, GO! More than 40 runners turned out for the Rotary Mile this year. Below, Rick Harris reaches the finish line first in the men's open race.

Winning Rotary Miler sets blistering pace

This year's Rotary Mile was a big success, drawing runners from across the province and beyond.

The total of 41 runners is up from 33 last year, and bodes well for the future of the race, although race organizer Ted Brandon says this year it seemed as if the race might never take place.

"We almost didn't have it because a sponsor dropped out, but Adidas stepped right in, and it was a real success," says Brandon. "It's a good event. People come to the carnival, and they get to see a free, exciting event. It gives them something to watch until the parade comes along."

Runners came from all over Ontario, including Toronto, Brampton, St. Thomas, Kingston and London. Brandon says many of these runners came to Haliburton just for the race. It was advertised in sports stores in Toronto and elsewhere.

The winner of the junior women's race was Lindsay Mathers of Port Carling, with a time of 5:28. Behind her was second-place Londoner Jane Freure, and in third, from Crete, Illinois, was Courtney Cochrane.

A Haliburton native, Marla MacNaull, won the open women's race with a time of 6:20. On her heels was Lisa Dargue of Toronto, and behind her Amanda Austen of Cannington.

The master women's category was won by another Haliburton resident, Barb Wood.

On the men's side, Torontonian Robert Major won the junior men's race with a time of 4:40. Following him was Rob Ludwick of Beaverton and Rob Dean of Kingston.

In the open men's race, last year's winner Rick Harris triumphed again with a time of 4:24. Scott Manktelow of Etobicoke grabbed second and Markus Carl of Haliburton came in third.

Thomas Linderoos of Toronto won the master men's race in 5:34. Ted Rogers of West Hill came in second, and Laurie Whitby of Ajax snagged third.

Fishing in rain, wind

by JOHN LEROY

Saturday August 10 was the 2nd Annual Lake Wilbermere Property Owners Association Fish Derby and family BBQ. Despite the rain, 64 people took part in the fish derby from 3-5 p.m. through the pelting rain you could see people fishing from shore, docks, rafts, and a wide assortment of boats. As Harold Floden and chief organizer John Le Roy started the official weigh-in at 5 p.m., the rain stopped and we were blessed with a pleasant evening.

The family BBQ and corn roast began at 5:30 as 115 people from around the lake converged on the home of Bob and Sally Stirling. The 17 dozen corn from local farmers Gerald Shkelton and Bill Young were superb.

The awards presentation began at 7 p.m. Congratulations to the children and adults who won prizes. In the children's categories: Jeff Davidson caught the largest fish, 480 grams; Sylvia Le Roy caught a total of 37 fish; Steven Hebb caught the largest weight of fish at 1795 grams; David Fitzgerald caught the largest Rock Bass, 155 grams; Amy Davis caught the smallest fish, 10 grams; Daniel Davis was the youngest fisherman at 2 years. The adult winners were Alex Le Roy, Eric Saunders, Gordon Lewis and Susan Le Roy. As well, there were draws for 70 other prizes.

The association would like to thank the businesses that helped to support this event. They were Angnews Red and White, Wilberforce IGA, Wilberforce Sporting Goods, Schwandt Home Care, Schwandt Aggregate, Direct Marketing Sales, LCBO-Toronto, and Lindsay Loblaw's.

Once again, it was evident how much the people around Lake Wilbermere enjoy the opportunity to get together.

Huntsville wipes out Jug City

by JIM MILNE

West Side Jug City was defeated 4-0 by Huntsville in Muskoka District Soccer action last Sunday, August 11 in Huntsville.

The team played without their regular goalkeeper but the substitute, Chris Holliday-Rhodes, did a creditable job in the first half. He allowed only one goal, although he felt uncomfortable since he regularly plays defense. Erin Ross, also a defenseman, gamely volunteered to play goal in the second half. He saw three goals get by him but he can't be faulted for the lopsided score.

Jug City again lacked substitutes. Huntsville is the strongest, fastest team in the league and Jug City couldn't keep up to them. This problem became apparent when key Jug City players, notably Chris Carl and Tim Davis, were injured in the second half.

The team will practise on Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. at the Archie Stouffer field in Minden. Unfortunately, the weakest team in the league, Alliston, has folded. Jug City, therefore, will be idle for the next two Sundays when Jug City was scheduled against Alliston.

Drag Lake's regatta sets sail amidst squalls and fine winds

by AL FERGUSON

For the first time in several years, decent winds greeted sailors on Drag Lake as they met at the start line on Saturday afternoon. Rain squalls made things a bit uncomfortable for the Sailing Coordinator, Bob "Commodore" Kowaluk and his crew, but they managed to get the race off right on time.

As in past years, the catamarans proved their speed in the race. The winning boat with a crew of Thorny Bailey and Robert Young won in a time of 35 minutes and 44 seconds. They won the Ferguson trophy for being the first across the finish line. Second in the catamarans was the boat crewed by Sara Katz and Lanny Totton, (43:24). In the wet boat class Craig and Barbara Martin won with the time of 38:16 and Al Ferguson came second in 43:05. In the Albacores the crew of Kylie and Robbie Booth and Heather Monroe came first 48:37 with the crew from Camp Scugog Northwoods of Bill Jewer and Sandy Glassford, coming second.

On Sunday, the skies cleared and the winds were very strong for the windsurfers. In a hard-fought race Dale Cunningham came first with a time of 20 min. 43 sec. Peter Turan came second in 23:20 and Lanny Totton third in 26:54. Congratulations to all who raced and handled the high winds.

Thanks to Bob Kowaluk for running the races, to Art Oulette for looking after the buoys, and to Diana Ferguson, time keeper.

Centre tells how to leave only footprints

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Are we literally loving our wilderness to death? That was the key question discussed recently at the Leslie M. Frost Centre, as a group of curious would-be campers learned about low impact camping.

Low impact means causing the least amount of changes to a chosen campsite by considering such things as where to pitch the tent and put the privy.

"Most of the camping that goes on in Algonquin Park is more high impact. The sites there tend to be in use in all the time," said Scott Reed, assistant recreational specialist at the centre. Therefore, it's imperative that campers treat their sites with respect.

Using a glass fish tank filled with water, Reed began by demonstrating what happens to the lake in front of a well-used site. "What's the first thing you do in morning?" he asked coyly, knowing the answer. "Go to the bathroom," answered one audience member.

Dumping a urine coloured substance into the green water, Reed then followed up with hand soap and toothpaste. The water immediately turned murky. "Would anyone like a drink?" he said, filling a plastic cup from the tank. No one took him up on his offer.

To test the camping knowledge of those present, Reed offered a wilderness survival quiz which deduced the following facts: sandy terrain and the forest floors make the best sites because they are most resistant to campfires; eating dried fruits and candy, not drinking alcohol, will keep you warm; digging a six to eight inch deep privy will allow nature to dispose of human waste, or a ammo box lined with a plastic bag; and setting up a campsite 100 to 150 feet from the shoreline is the best way to prevent impurities from filtering into the lake.

"But it depends on where you are. In this area where there are rock tiles, a campsite should be well back," said Reed.

Following the quiz, the group hiked to a campsite one kilometre away on the shores of St. Nora Lake to see the ideal low impact site.

Once at the site, people asked what type of cooking arrangements should be used: fire or propane? "There's been a debate going on for a number of years on what is the best method," said Reed. "But what it really depends on is where you are. In this area fire is quite acceptable. But in places like Algonquin Park where they have a clean-out effect, trees have been cut and burned to death." In this case, Reed suggests a propane cooker would be better and a fire should be used for heat.

But in many places, most campsites have been provided with a fire pit. If one already exists, Reed suggests using it to cut down on the environmental impact of the site. "Creating a fire ring with rocks is an old boy scout tradition and one of the worst things you can do. Hot coals can slip into the pockets between the rocks and after you've left the site, a fire can break out."

If you have to build a fire ring, Reed suggests building it on a rock face, using a mineral soil base to prevent the area from becoming scarred. The soil can then be dumped safely back into the woods when it's time to go.

But even using propane stoves can cause an environmental dilemma. "Stoves are cleaner and faster. But when you look at the global picture, factories have to be built to make the stoves and propane fuel can't be reused. It can become

There is more to camping than just setting up a tent. Above, Scott Reed, a recreational specialist at the Leslie M. Frost Centre hosted a seminar on low impact camping.

Courses will train hunters in autumn

If you are a new hunter and wish to obtain an Ontario hunting licence for the first time, or have not held an Ontario hunting licence since January 1st., 1968, you are required to complete a Hunter Training Course and successfully pass a hunting licence examination.

Hunter training courses will be held in August and September. Instructors should be contacted direct regarding dates and location of courses. Instructors in the Minden area are: Brian Austen, Minden, 286-4634; Norm MacKinnon, Minden, 286-1129; Wayne Wilson, Minden, 286-1123; Fred Rolfe, Kilmount, 488-2087; Harley Collings, Norland, 454-1982; Kevin Coppins, Kirkfield, 542-0814.

Hunting licence examinations will be given by appointment only. Appointments will be made starting September 3 and examinations will be given at both the Minden and Haliburton offices of the Ministry of Natural Resources.

For a hunting licence examination appointment contact: Ron MacKenzie, Ministry of Natural Resources, Haliburton, Ontario. Telephone: 705-457-2107.

The following are hunting seasons for Wildlife Management Units (W.M.U.) within the Minden Administrative District in 1990. Golfers master local greens

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Golf enthusiasts take note — four hole-in-ones were recently scored at two popular local golf courses.

The first was at the Blairhampton Golf Club on July 28. Tom Thompson from Miners Bay used his seven iron to knock his ball 164 yards into the second hole. This feat was witnessed by wife Carol and friends Dave and Tara Kerrigan.

The next day at the same hole, Jean Mewhinney watched as her friend Joyce McLellan of Toronto scored a hole-in-one. McLellan shot her ball 144 yards using a three wood.

On August 7 Ken Young from Stoney Creek was enjoying a quick game at the Haliburton Highlands Golf Club, when at the fifth hole, he drove his ball 123 yards right into the hole.

Two days later, Brian Sherman of Thornhill used his 17 Driver to score a hole-in-one at the eighth hole, driving his ball 199 yards.

Needless to say, all four golfers were more than a little excited by their accomplishment. Who wouldn't be?

Rain, rain go away! The wet weather didn't dampen the spirits of thousands of Bluegrass fans at the Annual Haliburton Bluegrass Festival last weekend. A dozen bands had the fans tapping to the twang of the guitars and the harmony of the singers.

BLUEGRASS FEVER!!!

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

FROM THE ROLLING HILLS of Tennessee and the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, the sounds of good ol' Bluegrass music could be heard echoing through the woods of Haliburton on the weekend.

The three-day jamboree was filled with the sounds of fiddles, banjos, guitars, mandolins, string bass and the famous acoustic steel guitar, the dobro.

The Festival opened on Friday night with Legion President Ed Pickard, Sergeant at Arms Grenville Draper and the Colour Party, followed by the Haliburton Legion Pipe Band.

The Boys From Indiana made their third appearance at Bluegrass in Haliburton, headlining the show this year. With hundreds of people sitting on the lawn before the stage at Glebe Park on Saturday night, the Boys played songs from their award-winning album "An American Heritage". They had the crowd clapping and stomping to their impressions of Grand Ole Opry regulars the likes of Hank Williams and Canada's own Hank Snow.

Also on the bill was Cindy Thompson, a champion Canadian fiddle player from the Ottawa Valley. Cindy performed three shows and was a definite hit with the Boys From Indiana who invited her up to the stage at their last show on Sunday afternoon.

Grass Creek, Straight Ahead, Grassworks and Haldimand County Line, Bluegrass Connection, Deanie Richardson and Second Fiddle, Lorne Buck and the Flatland Mountaineers also kept the crowd tapping through rain and shine all weekend. McDonald Bluegrass gave folks a fine taste of 'progressive bluegrass', bordering on jazz.

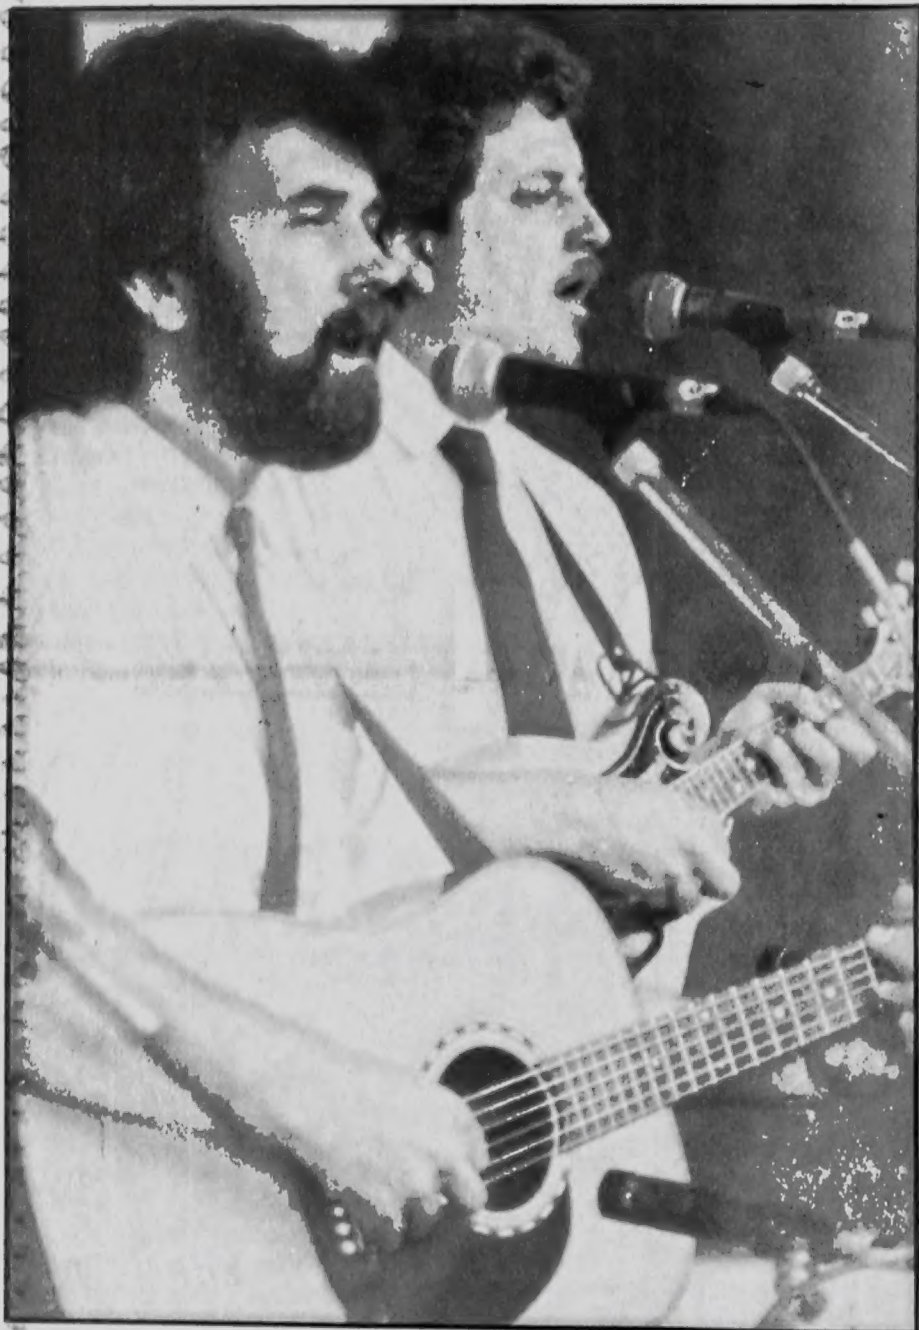

"It was a super Bluegrass this year," says Mabel Brannigan, immediate past-President of Haliburton Legion Branch 129.

"The day gate was down on Saturday and Sunday because of the weather, but the campsites were filled this year." In fact, there were 45 new campsites this year and Glebe Park was also full of campers.

"I believe there were just about 6,000 in attendance this year," says Brannigan. "And we were prepared this year to overcome the problems. . . of those who raised heck at the campsites last year."

The police were hired to ensure those with daily passes were not in the camping area after 1 a.m.. As a result there were 17 charges of trespassing on Friday night and two charges on Saturday night. But there were no serious problems reported all weekend.

"Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the weekend," says Brannigan. "The hill was just packed on Saturday night, and the rain didn't dampen their spirits at all."

Cottagers warned of boating perils

by ED WHITE
Staff Reporter

Boating laws and regulations are a mess and cannot be expected to control boat use in the future, speakers at the Miskwabi Lake association meeting said Sunday.

"You don't need a licence, there's no training, no requirement for insurance," says Gerry Strickland, association president. "The noise bylaws are vague, and not clear. Anybody any age can just pick up a boat and go. There's an awful lot of work to be done."

But Peter Evans, a recreational boating specialist with the Ministry of Natural Resources in Toronto, says even though the government has introduced legislation in the past, and is working on more now, controlling boat use depends on the volunteer efforts of lake residents.

"Talk to your neighbors. It's up to you as people to look out for yourselves. You're sharing a resource, so tell people how you feel about boating," says Evans.

He says it is difficult to enforce existing laws because it is difficult to catch people breaking them.

Association members complained of a boat which has been dangerously roaring up and down Lake Wenona, causing near-

A Red Cross representative, Mike Wood, also gave a presentation, trying to make people take boating safety seriously. He said 90 percent of drownings are people who are not wearing life jackets.

the station, wherever that is, and test you again. If you fail that one they'll charge you. You'll need someone to come and get you and someone to pick up your boat.

"It's a lot of time and a lot of hassle. And it can be a lot of money too. If you are convicted the minimum fine is $300, and it can go up to $2,000."

Wood also warned about the dangers of hypothermia. He said if a boat capsizes, the passengers should try to stay with it, and get as far out of the water as possible. If they stay in the water, even at temperatures as warm as 67 degrees fahrenheit, hypothermia, the cooling of the body's internal temperature, can set in quickly and kill within hours.

The Miskwabi association also acclaimed a slate for the board of directors.

'The noise by-laws are vague, and not clear. There's an awful lot of work to be done.'

accidents and making some residents afraid of being on the lake. Others complained about its noise.

"The people here are good," said one woman, "but on the weekend you should see it."

Strickland said "the transients drive you crazy. They come up and wreck the lake for everybody else.

He also warned against drinking and boating. He spoke about how it is dangerous and stupid, but used more practical arguments to convince people not to do it.

"People don't listen when I say it's not safe to drink and boat, but if you get caught on the lake by the OPP they'll take you to shore, breathalyze you there. If you test positive they'll take you down to

to have 50 docks for 50 lots, but they reconsidered this, deciding it wasn't going to be good for the lakes.

But one woman said the original plan was obviously bad, and that did not make adding new docks to the lakes any better.

Another said that it was not fair to add a large new area of homes to the area. She said when people buy a lake-front home they assume that the lake-front homes will share the lake with each other, not have to make room for sub-divisions which appear years later.

Wakefield said the Granite Group hopes to start selling the lots in a year. The proposal still needs approval from the Ministries of Natural Resources and the Environment, but Wakefield suggested preliminary discussions have shown the project to be feasible.

The lots would be sold undeveloped, but he said restrictive covenants would ensure there were no trailers or tiny buildings put on the land.

He said the company would build roads connecting the lots, and they hope when they are brought up to Ministry of Transport standards that the municipality will take them over.

All the money from the sale will be put into rejuvenating Hart Lodge, Wakefield said, which is in bad need of repair and needs to be fixed up or it will not be a viable operation.

THE TAXPAYERS COALITION of Haliburton County, Box 359 Haliburton K0M 1S0, (705) 286-1607. That name and address took shape at the first weekly meeting of a dozen executive members who are steering towards a public meeting September 6, 8:00 p.m., at the Haliburton Village Legion hall.

The local coalition and its 700 members have joined the Ontario Coalition, and will be cooperating with a similar group in Victoria County. We are the 56th gathering of taxpayers to join hands in this Province to spearhead a revival of responsible tax collecting and tax spending.

Phone Captains have been organized for every municipality in the County, and a parallel network has been set up in Toronto to contact seasonal residents. A full list of the contacts in your township will appear next week.

There is no charge to become a supporting member. Our funding is strictly on a donation basis, and our war-chest is filling quite nicely.

The focus is simple . . . November ballot boxes. NEXT WEEK: The Plan.

Democratic activists set sights on party-line MPs

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

Does the Prime Minister have too much power? Are Members of Parliament too easily swayed by the party line? Is the government increasingly at the mercy of special interest groups and large corporations which are unaccountable to the electorate?

An "Assembly of Electors" would answer "yes" to all of these suggestions. And the creation of such a grassroots organization is now underway in the federal riding of Victoria-Haliburton.

"It's an idea that's quite ingenious," says author and activist Munroe Scott. "It will pull the power structure back down to the electorate so our exercise in democracy is not left to proxy votes."

As stated in a pamphlet, the Assembly's main goal is to "reinforce the democratic foundations of our society by building a non-partisan bridge between electors of the riding and their Members of Parliament."

One of the roles would be to look over certain legislation that has been introduced but not yet passed in Parliament. In this way, opinions of residents could be expressed and presented to their MP before he or she heads off to Ottawa.

"We can set our own agenda," says Scott. "We can recommend to our MP what we think his position should be. For an MP who votes the party line, this is a threat. On the other hand, the MP who stands up in parliament and fights on behalf of his riding will win the respect of those he's representing."

The origins of such a citizens group was an open public meeting in Lindsay in March to provide input into the Spicer Commission's Citizens Forum on national issues.

Out of that meeting grew an interest in continuing to discuss political issues at the local level, and bi-weekly meetings were held under the name of the "Citizen's Open Forum".

At one of these meetings, Vaughan Lyon, a political science professor at Trent University, outlined the concept of a "Community Parliament".

The Assembly of Electors is based upon the idea of a Community Parliament, although modified by the Citizen's Open Forum to fit the specific needs of the Victoria-Haliburton riding.

A project steering committee is now in the process of dividing the riding into 66 wards with approximately 1,000 citizens per ward. The committee is also recruiting Assembly Advocates to promote the project.

Citizens without membership in any political party are encouraged to run as candidates for a three-year term. An election will be held in late Fall 1991 to establish the first Victoria-Haliburton Assembly of Electors.

To contact the organization write to: 223 Angeline St. S., Lindsay Ontario K9V 4R2. Or telephone (705) 786-2045 or (705) 454-8773 quite an issue."

For the ideal tent spot, it's best to find a flat place. "These type of spots will be tough to find at some campsites. So you may have to start creating your own."

Using a flasky (an ax with a hoe at its end), a camper can remove rocks and flatten a big enough area to set up a dome tent. Reed suggests a site should be flattened to accommodate a maximum of three people. "In a true wilderness campsite you would never do this," he said, adding back supports and pads can also be used to make sleeping on the ground easier.

For toilet facilities, it's best to keep going in the same spot. "Be conscious of where you're going and be consistent." In many local camping areas, facilities are provided. If there isn't one available, deciding as a group where the toilet will be is the best way to solve the problem.

Low impact camping is just one of the many daily seminars the Leslie M. Frost Centre is hosting this summer. For information on schedules and upcoming discussions, please contact the centre at (705) 766-2451.

yet passed by. But that would soon change. After moving his truck across the north end of the road, Mark asked his father to stand guard while he went up to his cottage to phone the hydro office. Luckily the phone line was still intact. After explaining what had happened and where they were, Mark returned to the scene of the accident. He carried a saw horse to block part of the road on the south end.

It had no sooner been put in place than old Mr. Barker came poking along in his station wagon, making his Sunday morning dump run and inspection. He craned his neck around, taking in the tree across the road, the dangling wires, and the smell of smoke. Had it not been for Mark's father waving frantically he would have gone right off the road as he strained to catch every detail. As it was his wheels passed dangerously far over on the shoulder. "That's all we need now," muttered Mark's father as the old station wagon jerked away in the direction of the dump.

Hours later the hydro truck arrived. There had been a lot of calls to make due to the previous night's storm and it was a tired crew that finally pulled up. One man climbed up a pole and turned off the power. Everyone immediately breathed a sigh of relief. That danger was finally gone. Next the tree had to be removed. Then the broken wires fixed and the power restored.

Through it all the rain drizzled and every car and truck passing by on the road had to stop and ask what was going on. Mark was soaked through to the skin and fed up with repeating the story time and time again. Yes, he knew he had been foolish to try the job himself. Yes, he had been lucky more damage wasn't done. No, he hadn't known the tree would fall backwards instead of forwards. No, he would never try such a thing again.

Finally the hydro truck pulled away and Mark and his dad piled the cut maple. They were too tired to carry it up the hill that day so they piled it between two saplings, 'near the scene of the crime' as his dad put it. Then Mark drove the older man home and returned to his own cottage. He stripped off the wet clothes, put on some dry ones and made a big mug of coffee. No sense in hanging the clothes outside, he thought. They weren't going to dry anyway. But it sure was good to have electricity for his coffee. With a cringe he thought of all his neighbours denied that pleasure earlier in the day.

Two weeks later Mark received a bill in the mail. It was from the hydro company. That little do-it-yourself tree cutting mistake cost him nearly three hundred dollars. He just paid it and never mentioned it to his dad. Mark figured he got off easy.

Tape introduces Haiti

To the Editor:

In reply to the letter of the Wednesday morning Prayer and Study Group of Haliburton United Church (Echo, July 2) concerning the children in Haiti, I would like to mention our Young Peoples' Group at Grace United Church in Brampton who supported a school program in Cap Haitien from 1980 till 1990, the Ecole Professionnelle Saint Esprit. Through these years we exchanged many letters and at one time the priest sent us a tapeletter in which he introduced us to his country, the work of his church in the schools that he founded, and to the people of Haiti. I would be happy to share this very informative and educational tape with the Haliburton Study Group if they would so desire.

Through leadership changes in our own church this mission has unfortunately been discontinued. But by reading the letter of such deep concern and the appeal for our prayers I became hopeful again that maybe someone else would like to respond to the call and might find a way to support this "direct mission".

We continue to keep our friends in Haiti in our prayers, and will never forget how richly we had been blessed through all these years by our contact with them.

Heavenly memories of Haliburton

The Phillips family is moving on

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

ONE OF THE FIRST THINGS the young upstart did was change the service times at St. Margaret's Anglican Church in Wilberforce.

After that first service, the recently-ordained Rev. John Phillips was greeted by Jim Ross, one of the respected church elders. "Well," Mr. Ross said with the wisdom of one who had seen a lot of ministers come and go, "you know what they say about a new rector. It's like a storm cloud on the horizon."

"It'll pass."

Nine years after that tongue-in-cheek welcome, Mr. Ross has passed away and Mr. Phillips and his family are passing on. But it's the people like Mr. Ross, who became valued friends as well as parishioners, which make the parting so difficult.

There was the party — yes, Anglican priests do like to laugh and sing and dance — up at a cottage on Haliburton Lake where the owner of a parasail asked slyly, "Do you want to get closer to God?"

And who can forget the rather deranged man who brandished a sword and stole Mr. Phillips' funeral cape, a gift from a bishop's widow.

"Oh yes," he smiles, not all too comfortably. "I confronted him Christmas Eve day at the Kozy Korner, asking him for my cloak back and coming across as the priest stealing clothes from the poor and destitute. But I offered to give him another winter coat. He said 'Sorry, this cloak belongs to me,' in this huge voice. 'It was given to me in England. It's mine.' I turned quietly to the waitress and said 'Can you please call the OPP.' 'It's mine!' I said, 'Yes, we'll just wait for the police.' He stood up and said 'Well, it's mine but if you want it, I'll give it to you.'"

Tables were turned when Mr. Phillips greeted an old friend — "I haven't seen him since" — from Toronto who was arriving late at one of the outdoor Sunday services. "As they came up the hill, I sang (to the Mickey Mouse theme song) M-i-c-k-e-y-m-o-u-s-e. I welcomed him royally. If you can't enjoy one another and just have fun, then maybe for me it's the wrong church."

He pauses. "I'm not sure if at Christ the King they're ready for me."

Before anyone gets the wrong impression, a smiling Florajean Phillips reassures, "He doesn't tell jokes in the middle of Communion."

Even his daughter Jenny Nicole says the one going-away gift she wants is a 1-800 number. You know what 13-year-old girls are like when parted from friends for even five minutes.

Some of those friends were made high atop the hills of Sir Sam's Ski Area, where the Phillips — John, wife Florajean, Jenny Nicole and 11-year-old John William spent many winter afternoons. (It's amazing how many ways skiing can be made into modern-day parables for sermons.)

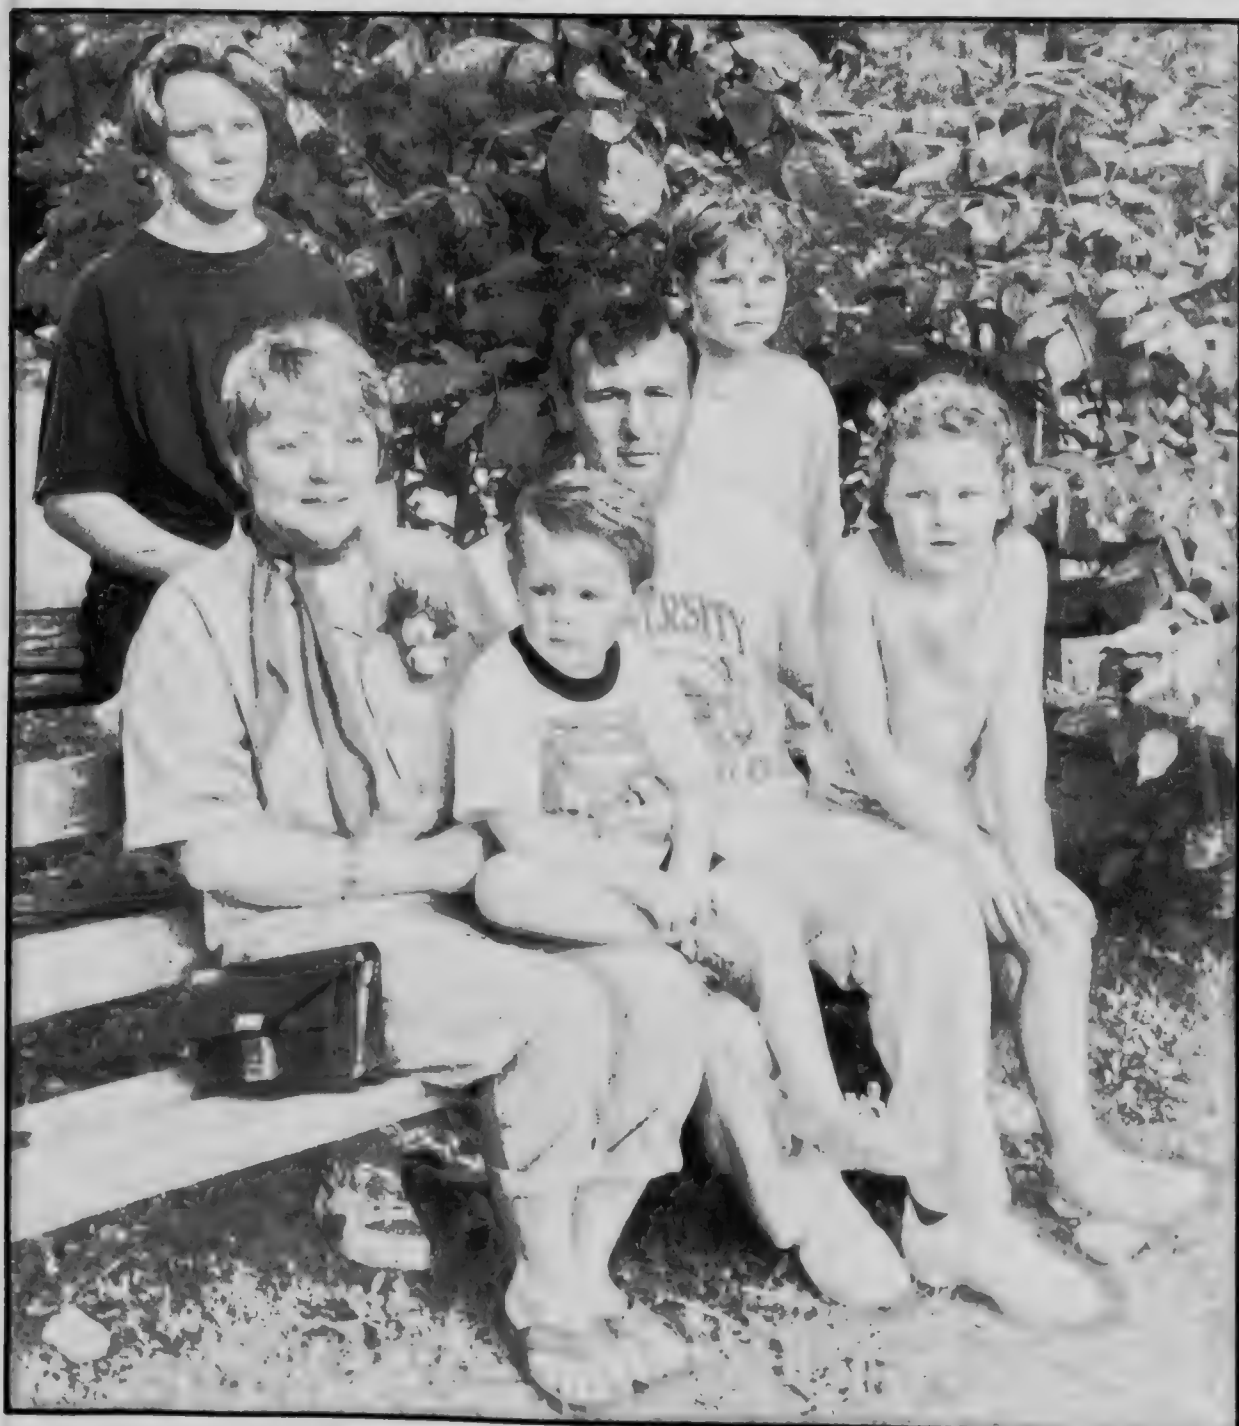

"It's important to see people witnessing to the Christian faith but it should also be natural to realize clergy are normal, real people who laugh and have friendships. God's being is within the real life. He's with us wherever we are. . . The things I've enjoyed most are those things which have been with family — good, wholesome, vibrant, funny and joyful."

The family is gathered in the kitchen of the manse next to St. George's in Haliburton. Their shared sense of humour soon becomes apparent.

John William, Florajean, John and Jenny Nicole Phillips say goodbye

Alastair, Sheryl, Andrew, Jim, Angus, Alexandra Crighton at farewell

"Finally, brethren, Farewell" for Rev. Jim Crighton

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IT WASN'T ONLY THE LAUGHTER which brought tears to the eyes of the dozens of people who spent their Sunday with the Crighton family.

"It's a short sermon but what are you going to do? Fire me?" said Rev. Jim Crighton at his last service at the Haliburton United Church. The next day, he and his wife Sheryl and children Alastair, Angus, Alexandra and Andrew were loading the moving van to begin their journey to his new parish in Ottawa.

"We're going to miss his humour," Ken Noble said on Sunday afternoon as friends, congregations from the three point charge of Haliburton, Lochlin and Ingoldsby, and members of the Wilberforce United Church gathered at Northern Eagle campground to wish a fond farewell to the family they had worshipped with since 1986.

"The first time I went to the Haliburton church I didn't know if I liked (the humour) or not," Mr. Noble adds. "He just gets into your heart and you can't help but like him. I'm certainly sad to see him go but you can't hold him back."

"He's the most Biblical preacher I've ever heard," says Bob Thompson of Rev. Crighton's more serious side, a comment heard from dozens of parishioners. "He's got such a depth and knowledge of the Bible."

"You can't go to his services without learning something," says Hadden Gillespie, who was keeping his best Crighton stories for the farewell party presentations.

"I'll remember his excellent leadership," Dorothy Way says, "his ability to lead us through this mess (in the aftermath of the homosexuality issue.) If we had had a minister who supported the changes, this church would have fallen apart. "He was the right man for the times. I believe God placed him here for a purpose."

Whether he likes or not — and he certainly didn't intend it to be this way — Mr. Crighton's main claim to fame is that he was in Haliburton when the lid blew off the simmering anger at General Council's decision to accept homosexuality as a way of life. Most interviews for The Echo were about "the issue", a very sensitive topic, especially in small towns. Mr. Crighton was against the General Council decision, but along with most members of the three congregations, wanted to battle the problem and the bureaucracy from within the church.

"He was honest in his own opinions and remained with his commitment to the United Church of Canada. The congregation supported him," says Jane Johnston, church secretary for the past three years.

"I appreciate his openness in discussing controversial issues without yielding up his own point of view. Yet he was tolerant of others' points of view. He handled the issues with balance and good judgement," says a shy parishioner.

Apart from that, the man added, "he is one of the ablest expository preachers I have ever heard, with the most impeccable English. It's very important that the Bible be expanded and interpreted and applied to our personal and community life."

"He's been good for us and the community."

Jim Crighton was the right man for the times, parishioners say says Mrs. Johnston. "He's participated in events and when he goes down the street, everyone knows him."

Everyone knows his family, as well. Little Andrew was born here, his siblings have captured many hearts with their angelic smiles and Mrs. Crighton has been an equal part of church life.

The transition from Regina to Haliburton wasn't easy, she remembers. "I many times went to Minden via Bracebridge," she confesses. As she's fond of telling people, "You all know me by Jim's sermon illustrations."

Sunday's goodbyes began when the Sunday School children gathered at the front of the church. "This is my last service so I won't see you for a long time. Is that sad?" he asked in the soothing tones of a BBC story teller. "But you know I'll always remember you. Do you know that?"

Later on in the service, he told them, everyone would be sharing in Communion "to remember that Jesus died for us. But it also reminds us that the church is not just the people here today. People all around the world are at church today. It's a reminder that although we are apart from people, we are all part of one body. It's the church of all the Christians who have lived through history."

As the children headed downstairs, Mr. Crighton told his older parishioners that people often come up to him and say "I'm a Baptist" or "I'm an Anglican." "I always tell them 'When you get to heaven you're all going to be united.'"

Mr. Crighton chose Paul's last speech to the Corinthians, read by a saddened Bob Thompson, as the first reading. "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."

Paul had had a "rather hard time of it," Mr. Crighton smiled before adding that Clarke MacDonald, a former United Church moderator and local parishioner when he and wife Muriel are cottaging in the Highlands, asked him whether he'd be giving the "finally, my brethren, farewell" speech. When Mr. Crighton said yes, Mr. MacDonald said "That's better than one minister I know whose last text was 'I wrestle with the beasts of Ephesus.'"

"So I'll remember that the next time," Mr. Crighton laughed.

In seriousness, the departing minister said the most important truth he's learned is "God is a God of grace, how God comes to people and regardless of who they are, he calls them, not only once, but three times" (in reference to the second reading of Jesus asking Peter three times "Do you believe in me?")

"I love Peter as a character. He was always putting his foot in it. Peter is never perfect and is the one who denied our Lord. Most people's response would be 'I don't want anything more to do with him' but that's not God's way."

"We too must be gracious with one another. I have found you a gracious church. You've overlooked my faults, you've been kind to me and my family. In return, I trust I have been gracious to you. And so I want to give thanks to you and to God."

Looking out over the filled pews, Mr. Crighton saw people he had married — "rather I performed the ceremony" — children he had baptized, widows and widowers he had comforted, and friends he had made. Behind him was the combined choir of Haliburton United and Zion United, singing magnificently his favourite hymns.

"As I look back on five years, I look back with happiness. Those hard times don't colour my memory," he said fondly. All through those trying times of the Issue, "you have supported me. One of the reasons I'm still here is because of you. It's you people who give me the heart to go on."

A few hours later, mingling among those friends at Northern Eagle, Mr. Crighton said "at the time, you don't really realize you're touching people's lives. That's kind of a privilege. The sad thing is you don't realize it until you're leaving."

There and with the grace of God go the Crightons.

The young met the old as Clarke MacDonald, former United Church moderator, and Kristal McGee who is just entering the Ministry, met at Rev. Jim Crighton's farewell service on Sunday.

Farewell to the laughs at St. George's

For instance, the Phillips are talking about moving back to Etobicoke where John and Florajean grew up, met and married.

"When you've been in a parish for a certain period of time, you end up on a list and sooner or later you'll be moved," Mr. Phillips explains. "In our case, this move became very appropriate. It allows us to be closer to our parents, who aren't in the best of health, we know the area, and plus, the parish suits my ministry quite well."

"They said he could do anything he wanted," quips his wife.

"They needed someone more exciting," says Jenny.

"Someone who isn't 100," adds John William. "I hope no one at Christ the King will be reading this," says a now worried father.

Mr. Phillips didn't laugh when he said this, but it's his laugh which will be remembered by all who heard it. It booms. It reverberates. It makes heads turn and people smile. John's here.

"At my first church as a student, the archdeacon said 'The first thing I'm going to do is change that laugh.' The bishop replied 'No you won't. That's the first time there's been joy and laughter in that mausoleum.' There are people from the seniors building who say they'll miss hearing my laugh echoing against the hill."

When Bishop Desmond Hunt phoned Mr. Phillips in the middle of a good night's sleep in 1982 to tell him he'd be going to Haliburton, Mr. Phillips had no idea where Haliburton was. (It also took a few minutes to clue in that the only Desmond he knew was a bishop.) "You'll love it, it's a plum," the voice on the telephone told the former music teacher. "Where's Haliburton?" North of Minden. "Where's Minden?" Do you know where Peterborough is? "Up and sort of right."

Sort of. To discover this strange place, the Phillips drove up one snowy day. When they asked Jenny Nicole what she thought, the three-and-a-half-year-old replied "It was nice but it's an awful long way to drive to church every Sunday."

Those roads have become part of what the Phillips will miss. Every Sunday there's an eight o'clock service at St. George's. Then Mr. Phillips must rush to either St. Margaret's or St. Andrew's in West Guilford, only to be back in Haliburton in time for St. George's 11 o'clock service.

"At Christ the King I'll have two services in the same church and I will not drive by any lakes and trees or see any deer and beaver."

"And there's a subtle seduction in being the rector in a small town. It's a comfortable feeling to be the centre of attention. In going to Etobicoke, I lose that, I become one more person in a glut of people. Maybe that's good. It's important to realize the ongoing church is not the minister, it's the congregation."

"I have a feeling that a lot of the good things that are happening don't come from me as the priest, but members of the congregation organize them and think they're important. It's the community working, not Florajean and I."

An important part of his ministry has been reaching out to young adults, children and the "unchurched." Communion is taken only once a month and at special occasions so newcomers won't feel overwhelmed by all the traditions. Coming into a strange place is scary enough, and Mr. Phillips doesn't want to scare away people who worry when to stand, when to sit, what they're supposed to do or say next. It's not just Anglicans he wants in his church, it's people who are searching for the strength and succour the witness of faith has to offer.

"There can be a tendency within the Anglican church to withdraw into ourselves. In the majority of churches, it's resulted in the weakening of the church, the failure to reach out and touch the community. Sometimes I want the tradition, other times I want it free and open so if I come from a non-church background I can feel welcome and comfortable. In this parish we accommodate a lot of people who normally wouldn't be here."

In the Phillips' time here, the church building has been expanded, and they remember with fondness the way everyone worked together. The United Church opened its doors and made the congregations welcome, and it's encouraging to see a church grow.

Now the whole process will have to start again at Christ the King, which has an aging congregation and needs the spark of young families. This makes the Phillips' task daunting — they really do work as a team — but they feel confident about the calling.

When the Phillips first left Etobicoke for Haliburton, Mrs. Phillips' parents thought it was a terrible move until they came up for the induction service. Her mother turned to her and said "You'll do fine here because everyone is like a family."

"The people here have made us their family," says Mrs. Phillips, "and now it's going to be hard to leave family behind."

Some things, such as good friends, can't simply pass like a storm cloud on the horizon. On September 1, there will be tears instead of rain.

Shooting for tradition in Haliburton hinterland

Cowans have enjoyed hunt camp since 1961

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

BERT COWAN LOVES TO HUNT.

By foot, by horse, by swamp buggy and by 4-wheel drive, he has forged his way deep into the woods to enjoy the call of the loon, the sound of the hounds, the sight of a moose, and the camaraderie which ties the whole experience together.

In 1961, Mr. Cowan and Charlie Titus founded "Picadilly", a hunt camp not more than an acre in size on the shores of what was then called Injun Lake and is now Upper Little Redstone Lake.

Today the camp is owned by Bert, his brother Russell and Percy Dunsford. It is on the west boundary of Eyre Township in the McRae Addition, which is now part of Algonquin Park.

In the 1989-90 Algonquin Provincial Park Master Plan Review, the Ministry of Natural Resources agreed to phase out hunt camps in the Clyde and Bruton Townships and in the McRae Addition within the next 19 years.

This has forced licensed camp operators to reflect on their tradition and to begin organizing to protect their right to pass this tradition onto future generations.

For Bert Cowan, the government's plans are always in the back of his mind when he travels up Kennis Lake Road on the way up to his favorite retreat.

"We used to have to lead the hounds in with horses," says Mr. Cowan, looking tanned and fit in his sixties. "It was really a picture. You'd stand on top of a knoll with not a trace of anybody. There was no bush and no such thing as a skidder back then, just horse trails."

Today the Cowan hunt camp is in the same rustic state it was 30 years ago. It's as if "time" in nature has stood still just to keep the memories alive.

In the cookery, an old Gurney wood stove, hauled in by wagon decades ago, evokes memories of a brisk fall day with the smell of freshly baked bread wafting through the crisp air.

A 16-foot picnic table with a shiny red and white checkered table cloth has been the centre of activity for budding doctors and lawyers and dozens of other hard-working men who have vacationed at the camp throughout the years.

The stainless steel sink is deceiving in its modernity, for there are no taps to complement it, just an old-fashioned cistern pump that draws water from the spring-fed lake 50-feet below.

There is a fridge for the essentials and a two-element stove used for heating up a quick soup or cocoa which along with dozens of spices are well-stocked items on the kitchen shelves.

An old dinner bell just outside the door of the cookery has hailed a hearty lot of hungry men from the bush or the bunkhouse which is only 20 yards away. Eight double beds are a welcome sight after a long day of walking and waiting in the woods.

Mr. Cowan laughs at the pin-up of a Playboy on the wall and instead directs my attention to a cartoon poster of a hunt camp with the names of all his camp buddies written above the characters depicted either in peril or in glory.

There is also a photocopied aerial map of the lands around the camp that the men can peruse before trekking out into the hinterland. Mr. Cowan points with ease to a speck on the map that is well-deserving of a "You Are Here" marker you would normally depend upon in a maze.

There are three other buildings at the camp: A bunkhouse with four single beds for the family, a recreation/luggage room, and a small cabin for the cook and her husband to stay in during the two-week deer hunting season in November.

On a typical day the cooks are up at 5 a.m. to cook breakfast and Mr. Cowan, the camp captain, wakes the men up at 6 a.m. Breakfast is over with by 7:30 and the hunting areas are mapped out carefully before each hunter sets out.

"For a bunch of men we've really been lucky. . . we've never had an accident. You have to know the territory like the back of your hand," says Mr. Cowan, ceding that the skill of a good captain in mapping out a safe hunting area for a day is the best way to avoid harming fellow hunters.

"For 10 years we travelled by boat and we'd trail the boats across land before starting to hunt five miles north of here. We'd travel the lake system and be gone for a full day.

"Once we left a lad out in the bush and there was an awful snowstorm. We had the trucks out to find him 'til we saw him coming down the road. We never missed him until Percy (Dunsford) went out to feed the dogs!" he says, finishing the story with a hearty laugh.

Because Mr. Cowan has been hunting since he was 12 years old, the tradition is an important part of his life. As he says, he's been down enough roads now to know where he is without a map or compass.

"It doesn't matter to me whether I shoot or not," he says in response to a question about the morality of hunting. "I just like being out in the bush with the men, listening to the dogs."

"I don't know why they want to close it," he says on the drive back to West Guilford along Kennis Lake road, a road he helped to build and grade for years.

"They've got enough Park to look after now. Most of them don't know what they're talking about. They've never been hunting and they figure it's a shame to hunt.

"I don't know what we'd do if they close our camp down. Everyone who comes here has a happy time. In 10 years I won't want to hunt but their boys will and their boys after them will.

"They want to take it into the Park where there's no hunting, but I hope they don't. It's paradise up here. . . that's why we call it Picadilly."

"We used to have to lead the hounds in with horses ... It was really a picture. You'd stand up on top of a knoll with not a trace of anybody. There was no bush and no such thing as a skidder back then, just horse trails".

Friends of the four-legged kind

Gesa Fluegel turns love of animals into a career move

by SUSAN CAMPBELL
Staff Reporter

CALL IT OLD-FASHIONED, call it uncool, but while most teenagers are contemplating what they'll wear to the next school on Friday night, 19-year-old Gesa Fluegel is hanging out with her buddies Jim and Prince — at the barn.

Jim and Prince are half-brothers. They are also two beautiful quarter horses with Arabian blood. And they are what Gesa has dreamt about since she was a little girl growing up in Germany.

But with her entry into adulthood and high school graduation only two years away, Gesa is already working hard to ensure that her dream of being outdoors with animals becomes a reality.

"I realized I wanted to be a veterinarian when I was in Grade 2," says Gesa, relaxing at an oversized picnic bench she helped her father build at the family's 50-acre farm minutes north of West Guilford.

A healthy black cat approaches and snuggles up to Gesa. Once a shy stray, "Spooky" had his lucky day when he walked onto the Fluegel property years ago and Gesa adopted him as a pet. Now he craves human attention — something Gesa unconditionally endows.

"There was a tv show with a veterinarian on each week in Germany," continues Gesa. "Since then, I just knew I liked animals."

The Fluegels came to Haliburton five years ago from Harz Mountains in West Germany. Gesa's father had his eye on the area since his first visit in the early 1960s. Today the family enjoys a house on Green Lake, the farm off Hwy. 118, and some bush property between West Guilford and Haliburton.

"It's more open here, you're closer to nature," says Gesa. "It was too overcrowded for us in Germany and there weren't so many lakes," she says, speaking with hardly a trace of her native accent.

"We took English classes at school in Germany," she offers as the reason behind her fluency. "School was much harder there. The teachers expected more, but they respected you more too."

School life changed for Gesa last year when she joined the co-op program at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

Normally, only those Grade 11 students graduating in Grade 12 can participate in practical work experience outside the classroom to prepare them for a chosen trade after high school.

But Gesa is going on to Grade 12 and then OAC (Grade 13) in order to apply for the program in veterinarian medicine at the University of Guelph. And having experience in the field would increase her chances of being accepted into the highly competitive school.

So Gesa made her way to the co-op office at HHSS and arranged for an internship at the Haliburton Veterinary Services under the supervision of veterinarian Laurie Brown. Every day for half a day Gesa was at the clinic gaining first-hand experience.

Gesa remembers the day someone brought a pregnant sheep to the clinic with a prolapsed cervix. The twins weren't due for another three weeks, so it was necessary to perform a cesarean section.

Gesa was handed a lamb to hold upside down and shake to get the fluid out of its lungs. It also became apparent that the animal would need artificial respiration if it was to survive.

The next thing she knew, Gesa was giving AR to a lamb by putting her whole mouth over the animal's nostrils!

A quiet moment at the West Guilford farm

The two eggs were removed and put in an incubator and turned each week before they hatched. Gesa was fortunate to be present when one of the loons hatched. But after only two days the little ones started fighting and the Ministry of Natural Resources took them back to the nest. The mother loon returned and all three swam off together.

Unfortunately neither twin survived; their eyes were still shut at birth and their lungs were not fully developed. It was just too early. Saving the ewe was the only consolation.

Gesa was also present at the birth of two baby loons early last summer. When her friend Lisa Malotte noticed that the mother loon had not returned to the nest near their house, the duo went to investigate.

When we arrived at the Fluegel farm, "Max" was there to greet us. Like Spooky, the nine-year-old miniature Dachshund owes his well-being to Gesa who saved his life by bringing him home from the clinic.

Although she is soft-spoken and a bit shy, Gesa is ambitious, and speaks excitedly about the challenge ahead and a life filled with learning more about animals.

"A lot of animals in this world are not taken care of," she says. "So many die because people just don't spend the time or money on them. Along the way I'd like to educate people about how to take care of animals."

Gesa grew up with plenty of animals around the Fluegel home. There were about 20

Heidschnucken (similar to sheep), six fallow deer, dogs, rabbits, hamsters, and trout. Her parents, Wolf and Elke, had a forestry business in Germany and animals were a hobby.

There are pictures of Gesa riding horses as soon as she learned to walk, but her father didn't want her taking lessons until she was 11. When she did start she took a big fall, but it wasn't long before she was riding again, overcoming any fears.

Today riding is more of a hobby than a competitive sport for Gesa. In the spring and fall when the insects are not so bad, she will ride Prince and Jim on the cross-country trails that wind their way behind the farm. She also sports her breaches and riding boots and practises her dressage.

Although the competition for entry into the veterinary program at Guelph will be tough, having experience will put Gesa in good stead when she applies.

"They don't want you to just say you love animals and you want to work with them. But if you have experience they know you are aware of what it's all about and that you're serious."

"I'd like to live on a big farm in Alberta before going to university," she says, although she already plans to visit Germany next summer.

"I'd also like to go to the Northwest Territories one day to help animals up there," she says looking off into the distance, as if her image of the future is an impression on the horizon. "I have a thing for the North and not too many vets go up there."

With this mix of idealism and practicality, Gesa Fluegel will be riding with those at the top of her field in no time, and her heart will be wherever she makes her home.

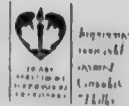

"So many animals die because people just don't spend the time on them. Along the way I'd like to educate people about how to take care of animals", says Gesa.

Terrific tureens take over Rails' End Gallery

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

PRESENTING A SIMPLE BOWL of soup to a hungry group of dinner guests could easily take on a whole new meaning, providing a host has just visited the Rails' End Gallery.

In a flamboyant and unique exhibition, the image of the simple tureen and ladle are celebrated and tested through the work of five talented potters.

Centennial Tea a resounding success

CARNARVON NEWS

by ANNE MCKAY

What a wonderful weekend we had Aug. 3rd and 4th. Saturday, the Centennial Committee hosted a garden party in turn of the century costumes which was well attended. The C.E. Building housed a grand display of antiques including furniture, quilts, pictures, handmade tools, spinning wheel and other artifacts too numerous to mention them all.

The Sunday Service was conducted by the ladies of the U.C.W. in costume and Rev. Grace Irwin, a long time summer resident, gave the sermon. This was followed by refreshments on the church lawn.

Mrs. Lyla Harrison of the San Fernando Valley, California, is visiting with relatives and friends for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Moore of Oshawa and Mr.

and Mrs. Greg Moore of St. Catharines spent the weekend with the Bill McKays.

Mr. Wilmut (Cuff) Thomas and friend of Scarborough spent the weekend with Laverne and Ruth Thomas and visited other relatives in the area.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tulk and son Mark spent some time with us, leaving grandson Mark with us for a week.

May Pounds, a one time resident of the area, was a guest of Ruth Gorrie.

On Sunday August 18th there will be a special service at Zion at 9:30 a.m. for the pastoral charge. No service will be held in Minden or Maple Lake. Guest speaker will be Rev. Clarke Macdonald, former moderator of United Church. A pancake breakfast will follow the service.

"We're the lazy guys," says potter Robert Tetu explaining why he and fellow potter Bill Rowland, cover their tureens in a minimal amount of paint.

Both describe their work as "spontaneous" in highlighting form and texture in their tureens. Rowland, a potter for over 18 years, uses a method called salt glazing to achieve a glossy look on the lids of his tureens. The rest of the bowl remains dull. Rowland does it this way to avoid distracting a viewer from the form of the bowl.

Tetu, who works in both porcelain and stoneware, also prefers form. His bowls are more squat and not as tall as Rowlands. Each tureen is the subject of much debate. In order to come up with the perfect tureen, Tetu may create two or three.

Keeping with the more traditional, local potter Rickie Woods sticks with the basics: a round tureen done in earthy colours. Woods works in porcelain and uses a mid-fired system. This means the kiln isn't as hot when she bakes her bowls, many of which are created on the pottery wheel.

For Scott Barnim, traditional is unheard of. His stoneware tureens are draped in cows and fish. Following the same line, Ian Symons' tureens rely on elaborate, coloured glazes, which highlight their rough textures and oval shapes.

In keeping with this theme, artist George Rabb (profiled in last week's Echo) offers broad samples of his work in an exhibition in conjunction with the tureen display.

Rabb displays a number of etchings, which draw their focus from a variety of landscapes captured in different seasons. Also available for viewing are a number of strange and weird sculptures the artist produced using found metal objects.

One of the more outlandish ones is entitled "Flight From the Barn". A rusted bicycle wheel becomes the propeller for a homemade aircraft some farm animals made to fly to freedom. The metallic "animals" pictured at the aircraft's wheel appear more as robots, rather than ordinary domestic farm animals.

Among his more serious works, Rabb includes some fun pieces. One which quickly attracts attention is "I Expose My Drawers". The artist did just that. Covering two desk drawers in glass, gallery patrons are treated to an inside look at George Raab. Among the items found in Rabb's junk drawers were spools of thread, toy cars, an old address book and Canadian Tire money.

Both exhibitions will run at the Rails' End Gallery until September 7. For more information, please call (705) 457-2330.

A THING OF BEAUTY: Potter Robert Tetu, left, lifts the lid on one of the tureens created by fellow potter Scott Barnim. The Rails' End in Haliburton is presenting a month-long tureen exhibit. Other participating potters include Blairhampton's Rickie Woods, centre, and Bill Rowland, right, who attended Saturday's opening.

Cycling helmets can save children's lives

Campaigns are currently being carried out across Canada to make cyclists, particularly children, aware of the protection that a certified cycling helmet can provide.

The Ontario Head Injury Association reports that of the 60 children who die in bike accidents in Canada each year, 45 lose their lives as a result of head injuries. More than 5,000 youngsters are seriously injured in bike accidents in this country annually.

Most properly designed and manufactured cycling helmets consist of four primary elements: an energy-absorbing liner, a layer of soft foam and fabric pads and a retention system.

Wearing a cyclist helmet that has been certified by the Canadian Standards Association could prevent a very serious head injury. The CSA standard is a stricter standard than either of the American cycling helmet standards. CSA has certified the three types of helmets.

Further information about cyclist helmets can be found in the summer issue of "The Consumer". To obtain a free copy, contact your nearest Information Centre in Haliburton and Minden, or call 457-2733.

Marathon Swim: Sharon Caldwell, Jennifer Abols and Heather Armitage.

Tug of War: Big Lake vs. South Bay. Men's: Big Lake, Women's: South Bay.

There was lots of fun for those at the volleyball court, and the kids had lots of laughs competing in the bury-a-friend race, the shoe throw, the egg toss, the three-legged race and the watermelon spitting contest.

Lack of wind forced the cancellation of the sailboat events, but the beach activities were enough to keep everyone busy. The kids also participated in swimming races and canoe races.

It was the creative Travis and Miller families who took home first prize in the sand castle building contest. And the Grand Prize draw for $600 was won by Haliburton resident Mitch Stephens.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Charles Hughes, above, stands proudly in front of the ripe plums in his garden. He says his may be the only plum trees in the county.

Rapsons return from viewing coast's whales and iceburgs

Craig and his wife Lynn and daughter, Carleigh; Sean Brice and Erin Brice and friend, Robin; and all four of the Chumbley and Sisson families of Ron Sisson's. Neighbours and friends also came and enjoyed the reunion and new acquaintances to the background of music supplied by the talented musicians in the family.

A wedding shower was held for Karen, daughter of Murray and Zelda Cooper, at the Centre, on August 3rd. The guest of honour received lovely gifts from the family and friends present. She will be married to Mike Hughes on August 24 at St. Margaret's, Wilberforce. We wish the young couple every happiness in their marriage.

Ken and Shirley Rapson have returned from their motor-home trip to Newfoundland and the Maritimes. Their month of travel included many miles in Newfoundland, the sighting of whales, and of icebergs, and time in Antigonish, N.S. where they watched Highland Games. Janet and Steve Robb with their children, Sarah and David are here on holiday from Woodstock.

Louise Cooper hosted a wedding shower for Beth Cooper on August 4th at her house. Friends and relatives responded beautifully to the occasion. It was like a minor reunion for many of us; a truly happy afternoon with food in abundance after the gifts were opened.

The sad note this week is the need to express sympathy to Joan (Daforge) Dawes on the death of her little grandson whose going is such a blow to all concerned. Our deepest sympathy is with her and the family.

Ken's Bait and Tackle business, located on the road to Kennis and Redstone, suffered $3,000 loss in damages when it was broken into on the weekend. Ken Bruce has been serving the fishermen in this business for three years.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Call goes out for Brohm reunion

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

The Ninth Annual Brohm reunion will be held at Balsam Lake Provincial Park as usual, and this year's reunion is on Saturday August 17th from 3-7 p.m. Since a lot of the Brohm clan are in the Haliburton area, spread the word around about this year's reunion.

Mrs. Myrtle (Ma) Tate at Log Chateau Burnt River spent a holiday with her son, Bob Tate, and family at Dunville. Mr. Bud Herbert of Thunder Bay is visiting his parents, Bob & Norma Herbert, for a while. Wilhemine Liscombe has been a patient in Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. Hope you soon feel better, Wilhemine. Congratulations to Cecil and Brenda Toole on the arrival of their new baby girl!

Mr. & Mrs. Walter Curl Audrey Curl on the Second Concession, north of Newmarket on Saturday July 20th.

Mrs. Pearl Brohm of Norland, was a Tuesday lunch visitor of Mrs. Myrtle Faulkner and Lawrence

Davis.

Childrens Craft & Story Hour continues at the Coboconk Library during August from 1:30-2 p.m. each day.

Mr. & Mrs. Larry Metcalf & family of Campbellford, visited with her parents, Gordon & Joyce Kay, at Norland and celebrated Joyce & Gordon's birthdays, just days apart.

Doris Winchester journeyed to Oshawa last Monday, for expected laser eye surgery, but the surgery did not take place attended the Curl reunion at the home of Chester and at that time, due to eye conditions.

Glen & Ruby Powell attended the Dunford reunion at the Roff and Ruth Casey home at Wilberforce recently.

Weldon Neal of Victoria Road passed away this week. Weldon had battled cancer for some time, and was Bexley Township's clerk some years ago. Very community minded, he worked hard to better his township and will be sadly missed by his many friends. Sympathy goes out to his sister Vina and daughter Ruth Foster & family of Keswick.

It looks as if the new Coby school is finally going to become a reality, as tenders are to go out for building it.

Mrs. Ellen Marles of Mississauga spent several days with her sister-in-law, Rod & Catherine Harrison, at Norland.

I just got a phone call from Grace King in Lindsay to tell me her mom, Flo Alton has been moved from Lindsay hospital to Durham Rehabilitation Centre, a part of Oshawa General Hospital and is in Room 247 2D, The hospital is on Alymer St. Oshawa. Flo had a stroke many months ago and needs some cheering up.

Glen Graham, son of Art Graham, is now in Lyndhurst Rehab. Centre. He has been in Sunnybrook hospital in Toronto since his serious car accident last spring.

Intended for last week

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wallace of Cameron were recent visitors of Leona Jewell at Norland. Dr. Brian McNaul has again been in hospital but is now home again and convalescing there. May you soon be much better!!

ing there. May you soon be much better!!

Glen Graham seriously injured in a car accident last spring, has been moved from Sunnybrook Hospital to Lyndhurst Rehab. Centre in Toronto.

Jim Dunnett, bartender at the Legion, suffered a nasty cut on his hand and is off work for a while.

Dorothy Burrows is nursing a broken arm, which came about in a fall off a ladder. Leave the climbing for the young folks, Dot!

One thing I've learned the last two weeks is that I would not care to be a long distance truck driver! My husband was admitted to Kingston General hospital on July 22nd, had heart surgery on July 23rd. He had double artery bypass and a valve repaired. I've made six trips in eight days to Kingston. He is now out of hospital and resting up in a very quiet spot at our son's family, with a granddaughter taking care of dressings and blood pressure etc. She loves to put her nursing skills to work. Thanks to the many, many of you who have phoned. He is doing quite well now.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Monmouth Fair awards

THE FOLLOWING are results of the 8th Annual Monmouth Agricultural Fair, held on the long weekend in Wilberforce. Results were compiled by Margaret Harrison.

DOMESTIC SCIENCES

The Domestic Science Section of the fair was well presented and very favourably received, a credit to the director Gerald Shackleton and his committee. There was a bountiful table of produce and another of beautiful cut flowers and potted and hanging plants. The mouth-watering bake table was difficult to endure as the day evolved and the prize chocolate cakes were entered by Joyce Maughan for the ladies; Tanya Vaughan for girls 18 and under; and Jesse Packard for the men's and boys'. Jesse Packard's cake was judged best over all, the champion.

The fresh berries both wild and tame, the jam and canned fruits, relishes and pickles were also abundant and must be a real challenge to the judges.

There was friendly competition between Gord Clark and Kristal McGee on the honey entry. Charles Hughes took first prize for maple syrup.

The homecraft and creative crafts sections were beautiful and varied. Delores Lee won top prize for the best quilt which will go on to Lindsay in the fall and possibly to Toronto.

The challenge trophy presented by Haliburton and District Lions Club, goes to the entrant with most points overall and this year goes to Freda Evans of Highland Grove.

The Jr. Division special prize donated by Bessie Shackleton for the most points in that division go to Amie Swan and Angela Duhn. These prizes together with the above trophy will be presented at the association dinner on October 12th.

A new feature to our show this year, thanks to Ken and Nadine Sanderson, was the petting zoo. A lot of love and affection was displayed there all afternoon and six puppies were given away to happy homes.

Directors Joyce Maughan and Linda Wood had themselves a time corraling the many hens, ducks and gees for the judge, Maurice Bradley, and there were also the usual array of rabbits and pigeons.

BABY SHOW:

There was an excellent response with 36 beautiful babies all dressed up in summer fashions.
